POLICE FIRE ON PARIS MOB, MANY HURT

PARIS, March 20.—A mob of 10,000 persons, with cries of grief on their lips, this afternoon interrupted the burial of Gaston Calmette, the famous journalist who was assassinated by Mme. Henriette Caillaux, wife of former minister of finance, Joseph Caillaux.

Breaking through the police lines at the cemetery, the excited men and women flung back all opposition as they fought to get near the grave to see the interment of the dead.

After a sharp conflict the republican guards and gendarmes were able to push back the mass of humanity and the burial proceeded.

This exciting incident ended the funeral ceremonies after the three-mile cortege had made its way to the graveyard beneath the gaze of hundreds of thousands of persons who thronged the streets.

In St. Lazarre jail Mme. Caillaux, the beautiful central figure in this tragedy of love, jealousy and politics, was comforted by two nuns as she gazed out into the rain.

The rioting at Calmette's burial was followed by many outbreaks in the streets of Paris, royalist and anti-Caillaux mobs parading back and forth, shrieking defiance to the present government or calling for the execution of both Caillaux and his wife.

Mounted police were kept busy charging the mobs. In one clash more than fifty shots were fired and many persons were injured. As the day wore on the situation became more serious hourly and plans were made to call out the troops with machine guns to prevent a reign of terror during the night.

All the police in Paris were on guard, for Perfect Hennion feared that the funeral of M. Calmette might prove the spark which would cause the greatest explosion of violence that has followed the killing of the brilliant anti-government editor.

Up to noon, however, the disorder had been of a sporadic character and not serious enough to cause alarm to the authorities. At St. Denis, a suburb, there was a grave outbreak, in which a number of persons were killed, but this violence was attributed to local political bitterness, as an election was being held there today, more than to the Caillaux-Calmette case.

WATCH ROYALISTS.

Police activity was concentrated to prevent a royalist demonstration. Leon Daudet of the Royalist League has been reported as preparing to arouse agitation similar to that which occurred at the funeral of Victor Noir, the journalist who was shot by Prince Pierre Bonaparte in 1870. The assassination immediately followed the revolution of the fourth of September.

Just before the funeral services began members of the Calmette family issued an appeal that the dignity of the last rites not be disturbed by disorder. This appeal, the rainy weather and the natural wane of interest in the case in some quarters helped the police maintain peace and order.

France is now turning its attention to the political results which will follow the tragedy and to the approaching trial of Mme. Caillaux. It is now believed that the pro-government force will be successful in preventing any revelation of political skeletons when the prisoner is brought to trial. At their meeting

BARE MORE SECRETS IN FRENCH TRAGEDY

The AMERICAN today presents the conclusion of the accurate and surprising story of events which culminated in the killing of Gaston Calmette, editor of Figaro, by Mme. Caillaux. The last installment of the story shows that Caillaux had almost a mania for writing letters to women telling political secrets. When he wished to divorce his first wife she was about to publish his letters to her, and they were photographed.

By C. F. BERTELLI.

PARIS, March 20.—The decree of divorce of Joseph Caillaux and his first wife was made absolute in 1911. M. Caillaux was then premier of France. To the astonishment of France and in the thick of European political complications he took as his second wife the former Mme. Claretie. It was at once after the marriage that friction between Caillaux and Calmette began.

SOCIAL BAN ON "MME. X."

The minister compelled his wife to break all relations with Madame X——, on the ground of the intimacy of the latter as a married woman with the editor. This made her undesirable as a friend for the prime minister's wife.

This social ban deeply hurt Calmette, who cherished a profound affection for Madame X——, and was strangely enough also a good friend of her husband. The trio were al-

13,000 Rebels for Big Battle

READY FOR ATTACK ON TORREON

JUAREZ, Mexico, March 20.—Thirteen thousand Constitutionalist troops are massing at Torreon for the grand assault on Torreon, according to latest advices received from the front. The Zaragoza brigade, commanded by General Benavides, has been joined by the brigades of Generals Chao, Hernandez and Garcia, and these forces are awaiting the arrival of General Villa and his artillery.

In brief dispatches received today from General Benavides he makes no mention of any fighting, and it is believed that he has made no move as yet against Bermejillo, where the Federals have a strong force. The Federals are throwing up intrenchments at Lerdo and Gomez Palacio, and if driven back from those points will be able to rally their forces behind strong fortifications at Torreon.

General Villa's message to General Carranza that he would be in Torreon by Sunday afternoon is now believed to be a boast that he will be unable to carry out, as a later dispatch from him said that he would capture it March 21.

There is no doubt here that the great battle will soon be on, however, as Dr. Triolo, who will have charge of the medical corps, has been called to Yermo. Constitutionalist officers here are making elaborate preparations for the reception of General Carranza and his escort who are due Sunday. All public buildings are draped with the national colors, red, white and green, and triumphal arches are being built in the principal streets. General Villa has directed that no expense shall be spared in giving Carranza a reception worthy of the provisional president of the republic.

WIFE DEAD IN DOUBLE TRAGEDY

LOWELL, March 20.—Mrs. William S. Sweeney of Hemlock street, East Dracut, is dead at St. John's Hospital here, a victim of murder. At the same hospital Michael Crummey of this city, who visited the Sweeney home yesterday, is dying, while the husband of the dead woman is being held at Lowell police headquarters pending an investigation.

Mrs. Sweeney's skull had been fractured with an ax. Crummey is terribly gashed about the head and face—probably with a big knife.

According to the Dracut authorities, a fourteen-year-old son of the Sweeneys, returning home from school, found his mother lying unconscious on the floor. Two younger brothers, who followed him from school summoned help from neighbors.

Mrs. Sweeney and Crummey were rushed to this city in an automobile. When the woman regained consciousness she refused to account for her wound. She died early today. Crummey has also refused to make a statement.

The police said they found evidences of a terrible struggle in the East Dracut home. Sweeney was booked for drunkenness, but later the police said they would call in an alienist to observe him.

BRITAIN SENDS WARSHIPS; ARMY INVADES ULSTER

DUBLIN, March 20.—England is preparing for war in Ulster province.

Two British warships arrived here today equipped for active service.

One thousand armed troops are being poured into the counties of Ulster province from the rest of Ireland to meet any hostile movement on the part of the Unionists led by Sir Edward Carson, Captain James Craig, Sir George Richardson and other radical leaders of the anti-home rule forces.

The transfer of troops into the north of Ireland, after the British Cabinet had decided against such action, indicated that the Ulster situation has reached a stage of seriousness which is alarming the government.

Five hundred troops were transferred to the Newry garrison, 200 from Curragh and 300 from Mullingar. Three hundred others from the Mullingar garrison were sent to Londonderry. There were other smaller troop movements.

Acting upon orders from the home government, the Irish authorities this afternoon took the most drastic precautions. The threatened invasion of a foreign foe could scarcely have occasioned greater military preparations.

Guards at strategic points are being doubled and troops are being massed in such a way as to make Ulster the battlefield if civil war must come. Preparations are being made for the movement of cavalry and artillery into the northern counties and for the mobilization of the Irish and Ulster volunteers.

The greatest excitement prevailed here today, and the belief was current that an outbreak may occur within the next forty-eight hours.

CARSON TAKES COMMAND OF THE ULSTER REVOLTERS

BELFAST, March 20.—Sir Edward Carson, Unionist leader in Ulster province, returned to his home here today to lead in person in the fight against home rule.

Surrounded by an armed body guard, Sir Edward, who had made a dramatic exit from Parliament last night during the home rule debate, made a triumphant entry to the lesser captains of the anti-home rule forces. Sir Edward declared that he had done all he could in Parliament. The time has come, he declared, for more vigorous and direct action.

Hundreds of shots were fired as the Unionist leaders drove through the streets of Belfast, and the display of firearms was such as to add to the danger of an armed clash between the home rulers and their foes.

Hundreds of members of the royal artillery thronged the street, but they were under orders to do nothing to provoke the enthusiastic Unionists to rash action. Cheering crowds, whose shouts of "Ulster will fight," rang through the streets, pushed and hailed to get near the famous Unionist leader when he left his automobile.

Captain James Craig preceded Sir Edward to Belfast ostensibly to keep the unruly members of the Unionist party in hand, but his real intention, according to some reports, was to strengthen the military organization of the Orangemen.

That blood will be spilled in Ulster is a prediction more forcibly made than yesterday.

Cool heads among the Unionists are clamoring for action. They argue that even if soldiers are sent among them, the religious element will work to the advantage of the Ulstermen.

A picked force among the Ulster volunteers has been placed under arms, subject to orders for immediate action.

PREMIER ASQUITH WILL REJECT PLAN FOR GENERAL VOTE

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, March 20.—Premier Asquith will reject the Ulster Unionists' demand for a referendum vote by the people of Great Britain on the home rule bill. Formal announcement to this effect is likely to be delayed, however, because of the critical situation caused by the Ulster threats to revolt.

Despite official denials the Globe today reiterated its declaration that warrants have been drawn up against Sir Edward Carson and other Ulster leaders. They are said to charge "treason," being based upon the incendiary speeches of Sir Edward and his supporters in Parliament. In addition to Sir Edward, twenty-eight other Unionists are alleged to be named in the warrants.

Though the government was upheld in the House of Commons last night when the Unionists' demand for a vote of censure against the Cabinet was defeated by a vote of 345 to 252, the usual signs of triumph following a government victory were lacking today. Premier Asquith and his colleagues are known to understand the gravity of the situation and though they are certain that the home rule bill can be carried they are expected to delay final action to the last possible minute.

The Cabinet had a session at the premier's home today and the leaders of the Irish Nationalist party also conferred at length. The Nationalists decided to press the government for immediate action.

150,000 MEN ARE DRILLED TO CARRY OUT ULSTER THREAT

LONDON, March 20.—Sir Edward Carson, who, with the Marquis of Londonderry, is regarded as the leader of the Ulster movement, has been a law officer of the Crown and is one of the most successful members of the British Bar. An Ulsterman by birth, he was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, and now represents it in Parliament. He is sixty years old, and twenty years ago was sufficiently successful in his profession to "take silk."

His first preferment under the government came in 1892, when he was made Solicitor-General for Ireland, and in the last Unionist Ministry he served as Solicitor-General of England from 1900 to 1906. This meant that in the normal course of events he might look for still higher office, and he was on the direct line for appointment as Lord Chancellor of England.

OWNS 80,000 ACRES.

Lord Londonderry is one of the great noblemen of the United Kingdom. He owns over 80,000 acres and is a Knight of the Garter, and an aide-de-camp to the King. Tracing his descent from Sir Piers Tempest, who fought at Agincourt, through a family distinguished in English history, he has himself had an active official life. Outside the political career open almost as a matter of course to a man of his rank he served for two years, from 1885 to 1887, as chairman of the School Board of London.

Before that he had been a Member of Parliament, for County Down, from 1878 to 1884, and Viceroy of Ireland from 1886 to 1889. Then, in the Balfour Ministry he held several offices, as Postmaster-General, president of the Board of Education, and Lord President of the Council.

Another of the men active in the Ulster cause is Lord Willoughby de Broke, who has large estates in Warwickshire. A man o forty-five, he sat in Parliament for Rugby from 1895 to 1900, and is now an officer in the Yeomanry of Warwickshire.

Another man who has been active in stirring up the Ulster movement is Frederick E. Smith, K. C., a member of the Privy Council and member of Parliament for the Walton Division of Liverpool since 1906. He has by his caustic speeches and determined utterances done much to stiffen the opposition of Ulstermen to home rule. He had a career of unusual distinction at Oxford, and in the last few years has made a name for himself as a leader of the bar.

According to what the Ulstermen have allowed to become known, Sir Edward Carson will find awaiting him in Ulster the framework of a complete uprising. On September 27, 1912, the famous Covenant was signed at Belfast, such men as the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church, the Church of Ireland Bishops, the leading landowners, and business men being the first to take the oath.

From that time on there has been steady recruiting and drilling of the Ulster forces, until today they are believed to number about 150,000 men. Their organization has been carried on with little attempt at concealment and last September Sir Edward Carson announced publicly that Sir George Richardson had been selected as their commander-in-chief.

It was not until last December, however, that the British government took any active steps against this movement, but on December 4 it issued a proclamation against the importation of arms into Ireland, and the first seizure of such contraband was made three days later.

"All for Ireland" Policy Is Demanded by O'Brien

LONDON, March 20.—William O'Brien, Nationalist member of Parliament for Cork city, and leader of the "All for Ireland" party, or "whole hoggers," as they sometimes are called, sent to the London Bureau of the American the following written statement of the Irish situation:

By WILLIAM O'BRIEN, M. P.

The Nationalist opinion in Ireland is daily hardening from one of uneasiness into an open revolt. It is realized that the exclusion of Ulster in the home rule bill, in part or in entirety, permanently or temporarily, is far from meeting Ireland as a nation, and is a negation of what all Irishmen have been struggling for during the last fifty years.

Mr. Asquith and his Irish allies refuse further concessions, but they stand by "the principle" already conceded, and that "principle" is the disruption of Ireland wherever a bare majority so decides. The Liberals in Britain acknowledge themselves bound to dismemberment.

Mr. Dillon on Sunday repeated that the concession was made in good faith, and said he hoped to heavens it would be accepted. As both Mr. Asquith and Mr. Churchill acknowledge that this "principle" is still open to further concessions in detail, the exclusion of all of Ulster may quite possibly be one of their "details" still to be conceded.

The outspoken Nationalist opinion is that a united Ireland alone can save the situation. Though freedom of speech is repressed by a subsidized press and a powerful secret organization, the Nationalist sentiment is beginning to make itself heard with increasing indignation. The county councils of Cork, Kerry and Carlow already have protested vehemently against dismemberment.

The national conference of the "All for Ireland" League on Saturday, speaking directly for one-fifth of the Nationalist population, called for the rejection of the bill if the Lloyd George conspiracy for the exclusion of Ulster is not dropped.

The only escape from the alternatives of defeat of the bill or bloodshed in Ulster is to return to the "All for Ireland" program of attracting Ulster into the Irish Parliament as opposed to the Lloyd George plan of excluding her and making her an anti-Irish State.

(Signed) WILLIAM O'BRIEN.

'COLLEGE HALL AT WELLESLEY FULLY INSURED'

Alpheus H. Hardy, former treasurer of Wellesley College, declared today that College Hall, which was destroyed in the fire last Tuesday, was fully insured." He said:

"About a year ago the building was appraised by experts agreed upon by the insurance companies and ourselves. On College Hall the insurance was raised more than $50,000, and on the contents the insurance was raised nearly $40,000.

"In other words, the building was fully insured. Of course, that does not mean insured for full value; for insurance runs as a rule to 80 per cent. of the value. The bricks in the walls have a value as salvage, in addition.

WON'T BE REBUILT.

"For development along new and broader lines, the college does need money. As for College Hall, it will probably never be rebuilt. It was a private college in itself; but now the administration, science and other buildings will be separate from the dormitories."

Mr. Hardy, who recently gave place as treasurer to Lewis Kennedy Morse, issued this statement by way of comment on the report that the insurance had been inadequate. That report followed a meeting of the executive committee, called by the president, Bishop William Lawrence.

President Ellen Fitz Pendleton, who was present at the meeting of the executive committee, explained: "All students have been notified to return by April 7. It is hoped to resume sessions at that time. The academic activities are crippled. College Hall was the centre of our life and work. With that in ruins, Wellesley is paralyzed."

"SOME ARE PRICELESS."

Bishop Lawrence added: "Every laboratory is gone. There is not a lecture room or recitation room left. The college has not an instrument for conducting an experiment in chemistry or physics. All scientific collections which have been forty years gathering are lost. Some of them were priceless, and all were absolutely necessary for the daily work of these departments. The loss of the zoological museum and fine geological collection are both great misfortunes.

"Chapel, gymnasium, dormitories and library are now only disconnected units and cannot do their work. These departments must go on, but they cannot go on without equipment. It is imperative that steps be taken at once to repair the loss, but officers are at a loss what steps to take."

Johnson's 500-Mile an Hour Car Patented

CLEVELAND, March 20.—A patent has been granted to the estate of Tom L. Johnson, four times Mayor of Cleveland, for an electric car invented by Johnson which, if it fulfills all the experts now say is possible, will revolutionize traffic conditions and rehabilitate the fortunes of the Johnson family. The invention is said to make a speed of 500 miles an hour possible.

Walsh Has Patrol Wagon Act Amended

The Senate passed the amendment, which now goes to the House.

MISS HELEN HUNTINGTON (on the right) welcoming her future mother-in-law, Mrs. John Astor, on the pier at New York after the great liner Imperator had docked after a tempestuous voyage.

MRS. ASTOR IS WELCOMED BY SON'S FIANCEE

NEW YORK, March 20.—With the big bronze eagle perched on her bow, shorn of its wings and bearing the scars of a tempestuous transatlantic voyage, the Imperator, mammoth liner of the Hamburg-American Company, reached port twenty-four hours late, with 3,873 souls on board.

The voyage was the stormiest encountered since the Imperator's launching. It was also her first visit in four months, and during her vacation she was partly remodeled and 500 tons of smokestacks were taken from aloft to steady her.

Prominent among the passengers was Mrs. John Astor, who has come from England to attend the wedding of her son, Vincent, to Miss Helen Dinsmore Huntington. Vincent, Miss Huntington and her mother met Mrs. Astor at the pier and accompanied her to Vincent's town house in Fifth avenue. Mrs. Astor fondly kissed her son's fiancee.

SAY BREITUNG HEIRESS IS NOT LABORER'S WIFE

NEW YORK, March 20.—Miss Juliet Breitung, nineteen years old, daughter of Edward N. Breitung, millionaire banker, is at the St. Regis Hotel today with her mother. Max Frederick Kleist, formerly a garden laborer at Marquette, Mich., is working in a silver mine in Arizona. Banker Breitung has large mining interests. At the marriage license bureau has been filed a sworn statement that the Rev. Dr. Charles Lewis Slattery of Grace Church married on November 12, 1913, Miss Juliet Breitung, nineteen-year-old daughter of Edward N. and Mrs. Charlotte G. Breitung, living at the St. Regis Hotel, to Max Frederick Kleist, twenty-three years old, a machinist whose mother's name and address are given as Mrs. Wilhelmina South Kleist, Manistique, Mich.

Efforts to secure an explanation of the forenoon strange array of coincidences developed a puzzling mystery today. When asked if her daughter were married Mrs. Breitung said:

"It is all true."

The daughter corroborated her mother's statement. "Indeed it is false," said the millionaire's pretty daughter." It is absolutely a case of mistaken identity. Somebody has wilfully misused our names and we are going to start an investigation and find out who is responsible. I never heard of such a person as Max Frederick Kleist."

"Nor I," added Mrs. Breitung.

"If I were married to the man you mention even if he were only a gardener or a machinist I wouldn't hesitate to announce it," went on the daughter. "I'd be proud to have it known."

The Breitungs have a Summer home at Marquette, Mich., and a young man named Kleist was employed on a neighboring estate. Kleist came East about the same time that the Breitungs did. He seemed to have plenty of money, but because he failed to go to work he was asked to leave the rooming place where he had put up and went to a hotel.

U. S. Tourists Among Dead in Venice Wreck

VENICE, March 20.—Several American tourists are now believed to have lost their lives in the sinking of a crowded pleasure steamer by the Italian torpedo boat No. 5 near the Lido last night.

An American woman, who was among the passengers on the lost steamer, said that her husband and two children had gone down. The woman was hysteric.

Divers worked with desperate energy today to rescue the bodies of fifty or more victims of the tragedy. By noon thirty corpses had been brought to the surface of the wreck. These included the captain of the ship, a Mrs. Drake and her daughter.

Sailors from the Hohenzollern, the private yacht of Emperor William of Germany, assisted in the rescue work. Many of those who were saved were still suffering from the effects of their tragic experience. Among the survivors were two honeymoon couples.

The steamers had more than 100 persons on board when she was rammed. She plied in the Lagoon of Venice and the Grand Canal among the chain of islands separating the lagoon from the Adriatic Sea.

PROGRESSIVES AGAINST WILSON ON TOLL REPEAL

GORGAS RIGHT ON CANAL TOLLS, SAYS GALLIVAN

WASHINGTON, March 20.—All the progressive strength in Congress will be thrown against President Wilson in his efforts to repeal the toll exemption clause of the Panama Canal act, according to Representative Victor Murdock, leader of the House Progressives. He issued a statement today that says:

"Both Democrats and Republicans are hopelessly divided. A little over one year ago all three parties covenanted with the people to exempt coastwise traffic. Today Republicans and Democrats, as parties, are breaking their pledges. The Progressive party, free from the influence of sectional or selfish interest, but actuated by principle and by the highest moral conviction, is standing by the contract with the people. Thirteen million voters in 1912 elected the American Congress to carry out their will in this matter. To scorn that mandate of the people now is to violate the principles of representative government and to surrender the sovereignty of the American people."

Murdock asserted there was no violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in the free tolls provision and declared that the machinations of the trans-continental railroads were menacing the Monroe Doctrine. The danger of departure from traditional freedom or from entangling alliances with foreign powers and freedom of commerce between the States make necessary the most uncompromising adherence to American principles in this crisis, he said.

"We do not read the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in a spirit of usury and over-reaching solicitation to divest Britain, so as its terms are explicit," the statement continues. "Were Shoot terms sanctioned, we could not violate them and keep the respect of other nations, but the terms of the treaty are with us, and if we misread them against ourselves we cannot keep our own respect. The representatives of the people are not asked merely to suspend the exemption until their rights can be arbitrated, but they are asked to surrender national dishonor.

"If dollar diplomacy is to be succeeded by a foreign policy of peace in any sense, whereby our domestic affairs are to wait upon the dictation of foreign ministers, then a time has come for a new declaration of independence."

"Lena the Pianist" Dead in Hallway

NEW YORK, March 20.—A woman known as "Lena, the piano player," was found dead early today by a policeman in a hallway at No. 152 East Third street. Death was said to be due to natural causes. A few days ago the woman told a neighbor she expected to die soon.

Only one "BROMO QUININE" LAXATIVE BROMO QUININE E. W. GROVE. Cures a Cold in One Day. 25c

Street Commissioner Gallivan, who is running for Congress in the Twelfth District, at several open-air rallies throughout his district last night, came out in emphatic approval of Colonel Gorgas' statement, cabled to the Boston AMERICAN. "There is no better judge in all the world of the immense benefit that free tolls are sure to be to American coastwise shipping than Colonel Gorgas," said Mr. Gallivan. "There are plenty of ship yards, there are millions of capital, to build a fleet of any size if the American government will make the conditions attractive.

"After all, it is a question of Americanism, and as Senator Jones of Washington said on Wednesday: 'The attempt to repeal the exemption clause appears to be the price paid by the United States for non-interference in Mexico by foreign powers.' I have the greatest admiration in the world for President Wilson, but I repeat what I have said on many other occasions. His advisers are giving him bad advice. I could find no good reason in the President's message to Congress to turn about and undo the work so well done by the last Congress. The British Ambassador seems to be on the job every hour of the day, in close conference with President Wilson. The profit army of American manhood will not and ought not to follow the advice coming from such source. I believe in America, I glory in its past, and I pray for its future. The Baltimore convention gave us good, sound American doctrine, and when I am elected to Congress I propose to stand firmly on that platform."

Mr. Gallivan strongly advocated that in his judgment the retention of the exemption clause would aid in the revival of ship building in South Boston and in the increase of the work being done at Fore River. He argued that this would be of immense benefit to the Twelfth District as a whole, and he firmly promised to do all in his power to aid in that work, to benefit the district in this matter.

"Aggie Lynch" Finds Justice in the Study of Boston Court

Florence Nash Tells What She Saw Through Eyes of Play Character.

At the invitation of the AMERICAN, Miss Florence Nash, who plays the "cute little blackmailer", Aggie Lynch, in "Within the Law" at the Majestic Theatre, visited the Municipal Court building and viewed the proceedings through the eyes of the character she represents in the play. Miss Nash is a brilliant young college graduate, with all the finer ideals of the educated woman—a young woman whose private life is a striking contrast to the little black-mailer she portray's in Bayard Veiller's drama. Miss Nash submits the following impression of Aggie Lynch on what happened in the municipal court yesterday.

By FLORENCE NASH.

Gee, but these Boston Guys are polite! I got lost down at the Municipal Court building and had to ask my way through a crowd that looked like a mixture of baseball fans and grand-opera chorus people. And they gave me the up-and-down and pass on! They did not! They'd lift their hats and say they didn't know.

Then I met a guy that was bright and he told me where to go. No wonder he knew, he turned out to be Probation Officer Linehan who's used to handlin' out information. A little while later, I saw him read a record that sent a guy to jail for four months.—I didn't hear him, though.

They've got the movie idea at the courts in Boston. I wish they'd read Blanche Bates' advice "to make your voice worth the extra two dollhrs." But they won't, they've got the humane idea over here. If you think I'm tryin' to con you, go down and see Sergeant Dunham's "this hurts me more than you" expression. He looks awful kind but I'd hate to have him catch me with a package of sniffers' bliss.

I saw Judge Wentworth send a dame up for boozin', but she was such a tattered lookin' skirt that you thought it would patch her up a bit to go out to Sherborn.

"AFTER THE DOPE."

And say, Clerk Barry looks just like Ed. Holt made up for the part! There was another dame, up for poke sellin' that had an ostrich feather long enough and straight enough to delight the hearts of an English sparrow.

Then I heard Clerk Lord say "$50 fine." Then I knew what they mean by hypocritical! New Englander 'cause that guy looked like an honest book-agent and no book-agent could afford the fifty.

I was out in the corridor talkin' to Phelan of the AMERICAN when a hearty voice said, "well, if that ain't Aggie Lynch." It was Lieutenant Rooney. That's the kind of a cop that a crook has to look out for. He makes you feel so like a pal of his that you forget to put on a Maxim silencer before you shoot your head off and then the first thing you know, he's got the dope he was after.

We went up into Assistant-District Attorney Lavelle office. There's a guy that's on the level with his job. When an amateur dip pleaded to be let off on account of aged parents, he told him he wasn't tryin' him, but he wouldn't dismiss any case where an able-bodied man stole a pocket-book from a dame.

After I got through watchin' him tryin' the non-support cases, I realized that there'd be no Suffragettes if all men had as much consideration for woman's rights.

There was one little lady who told him her husband stopped the gas, the grocery bill, the milk bill and had only given five cents to her and the kid for eight weeks. She wasn't whinin', just statin' facts.

SUPERS TO FRONT.

Then a little girl came in with her mother, who was holdin' her baby. When the attorney asked her how long she'd been married, she said a year. I thought she was stringin' us until her husband's lawyer said they'd been married the day before the kid came.

No only married her because they said they wouldn't bother him." Lavelle made him give her half he makes, and, believe me, any man that wouldn't want to live in the house with that baby is a skunk.

I got downstairs again just in time to see Timothy Callahan and Ex-Senator John J. Gartland conferrin' with the judge. It looked like the rehearsal of a court room scene stopped for a minute while the stage-manager and author were havin' a confab. And, say, no stage-manager could ever get by with that court-room scene.

The supers weren't enough in the back-ground. Why there was one fellow there with a bandaged head that looked as though he was there as evidence, and he never did a thing. That's bad stuff! And the cleanest parts were over-played. You couldn't understand them.

Since I've been to court in Boston I disagree with Veiller when he says "New-a-days, we don't call them courts of justice, we call them courts of law."

Fall Kills Lawson.

CHICAGO, March 20.—John L. Lawson, one of the best known newspapermen in the Middle West, was killed by a fall in the Chicago Press Club building.

Mme. Aguglia a Hit in Comedy at Hub

Mimi Aguglia and Italian company appeared in "Santarella," a comedy by E. Scarpetta, at the Hub Theatre last night.

"Santarella," which may be translated as "The Little Saint," is an abrupt departure from the general character of Mme. Aguglia's repertoire. It is pure comedy from beginning to end.

The performance was admirable throughout, played in true comedy vein without exaggeration, full of both brilliant and quiet humor. Mme. Aguglia as Nannina showed herself as gifted in comedy as in tragic roles. Mr. Dondini as Felice was thoroughly delightful, and the concerted action of the whole company was smooth and finished. The play tonight will be "The Daughter of Jorio."

PROGRESSIVES AGAINST WILSON ON TOLL REPEAL

GORGAS RIGHT ON CANAL TOLLS, SAYS GALLIVAN

WASHINGTON, March 20.—All the progressive strength in Congress will be thrown against President Wilson in his efforts to repeal the toll exemption clause of the Panama Canal act, according to Representative Sim of Murdock, leader of the House Progressives. He issued a statement today that says:

"Both Democrats and Republicans are hopelessly divided. A little over a year ago all these parties were elected with the people in exempt coastwise traffic. Today Republicans and Democrats as parties are breaking from their pledges. The Progressive party, free from the influence of sectional or selfish interests, has adhered to principle and now stands by its last declaration to maintain by the contract with the people. Seventy million people have entrusted the American Congress to carry out their will in this matter. The eyes of the world are upon us to see if we are the principles of representative government, of democracy and the integrity of the American people."

Murdock asserted that there is no treaty, no law, no Democratic platform binding on the free tolls provision and declared that the British Ambassador seems to be on the job more than any of the rest of the diplomats. The British Ambassador seems to be on the job every hour of the day, in close consultation with President Wilson and the great army of American manhood drilled and equipped to defend the canal coming from such a source. "I believe in America, I glory in its flag and I pray for its future. The Baltimore convention gave no good, sound American doctrine, and when Governor Marshall refused the convention to stand firmly on that platform."

Mr. Gallivan strongly advocated that in his judgment the retention of the exemption clause would aid in the revival of shipping in South Boston and in the increase of the world's business done at that place. He argued that this would be of immense benefit to the Twelfth district and to the city of Boston and that he would do all in his power to aid in the work, to benefit the district in this matter.

"Aggie Lynch" Finds Justice in the Study of Boston Court

Florence Nash Tells What She Saw Through Eyes of Play Character.

At the invitation of the AMERICAN, Miss Florence Nash, who plays the "cute little blackmailer," Aggie Lynch, in "Within The Law" at the Majestic Theatre, visited the Municipal Court building and viewed the proceedings through the eyes of the character she represents in the play. Miss Nash is a brilliant young college graduate, with all the finer ideals of the educated woman—a young woman whose private life is a striking contrast to the little blackmailer she portrays in Bayard Veiller's drama. Miss Nash submits the following impression of Aggie Lynch on what happened in the municipal court yesterday.

BY FLORENCE NASH.

Gee, but these Boston Guys are polite! I got lost down at the Municipal Court building and had to ask my way through a crowd that looked like a mixture of baseball fans and grand opera chorus people. Did they give me the up-and-down and pass on? They did not! They'd lift their lids and say they didn't know.

Then I met a guy that was bright and he told me where to go. No wonder he knew, he turned out to be Probation Officer Linehan, who's used to handlin' out information. A little while later, I saw him read a record that sent a guy to jail for four months—I didn't hear him, though.

They've got the movie idea at the courts in Boston. I wish they'd read Blanche Bates' advice "To make your voice worth its weight in two dollars." But they won't, they've got the lunacy idea over here. If you think I'm tryin' to con you, go down and see Sergeant Riordan's "this hurts me more than you" expression. He looks awful kind but I'd hate to have him catch me with a package of puffed rice. I was Jimmy Wentworth send me up for "sonin'," but she was such a tattered looking skirt that you thought it would patch that up a bit to go out to Sherborn.

"AFTER THE HOPE."

And say, Clerk Barry looks just like Holt made up for the part. There was another name up for "coke sellin'" that had an ostrich feather long enough and straight enough to delight the heart of an English lancer.

Then I heard Clerk Lord say "No fine." That's how they mean by hypocritical New Englander 'cause that guy looked like an honest book-agent and no book-agent could afford the fifty.

I was out in the corridor talkin' to Phelan of the AMERICAN when a hearty voice said, "well, if that ain't Aggie Lynch." It was Lieutenant Rooney. That's the kind of a cop that a crook has to look out for. He makes you feel so like a pal of his that you forget to put on a Maxim silencer before you shoot your head off and then the first thing you know, he's got the dope he was after.

We went up into Assistant-District Attorney Lavelle office. There's a guy that's on the level with his job. When an amateur pix pleaded to be let off on account of aged parents, he told him he wasn't tryin' him, but he wouldn't dismiss any case where an able-bodied man stole a pocketbook from a dance.

After I got through watchin' him tryin' the non-support cases, I realized that there'd be no Suffragettes if all men had as much consideration for woman's rights.

There was one little lady who told him her husband had stopped the gas, the grocery bill, the milk bill and had only given five cents to her and the kid for eight weeks. She wasn't whinin', just statin' facts.

SUPERS TO FRONT.

Then a little girl came in with her mother, who was holdin' her baby. When the attorney asked her how long she'd been married, she said a year. I thought she was fibbing, as until her husband's lawyer said they'd been married the day before the kid came.

"He only married her because they said they wouldn't bother him." Lavelle made him give her half he makes, and, believe me, any man that wouldn't want to live in the house with that baby is a skunk.

I got downstairs again just in time to see Timothy Callahan and Ex-Senator John J. Gartland conferrin' with the judge. It looked like the rehearsal of a court room scene stopped for a minute while the stage-manager and author were havin' a confab. And say, no stage-manager could ever get by with that court-room scene.

The supers weren't enough in the back-ground. Why there was one fellow there with a bandaged head that looked as though he was there as evidence, and he never did a thing. That's bad stuff! And the dialect parts were over-played. You couldn't understand them.

Since I've been to court in Boston I disagree with O'Brien when he says "Now-a-days, we don't call them courts of justice, we call them courts of law."

Fall Kills Lawson.

CHICAGO, March 20.—John L. Lawson, one of the best known newspapermen in the Middle West, was killed by a fall in the Chicago Press Club building.

Miss Florence Nash, "Aggie Lynch" in "Within the Law," who writes story of court visit for AMERICAN.

Mme. Aguglia a Hit in Comedy at Hub

Mimi Aguglia and Italian company appeared in "Santarella," a comedy by E. Scarpetta, at the Hub Theatre last night.

"Santarella," which may be translated as "The Little Saint," is an abrupt departure from the general character of Mme. Aguglia's repertoire. It is pure comedy from beginning to end.

The performance was admirable throughout, played in true comedy vein without exaggeration, full of both brilliant and quiet humor. Mme. Aguglia as Nannina showed herself gifted in comedy as in tragic roles. Mr. Dondini as Felice was thoroughly delightful, and the concerted action of the whole company was smooth and finished. The play tonight will be "The Daughter of Jorio."

most inseparable and always to be seen together at the theatres and restaurants.

OPEN WAR ON CAILLAUX.

Immediately the first signs of a polemic appeared in the Figaro, Caillaux's political enemies saw their opportunity and planned to use Calmette as their instrument for the financier's political coup de grace. Here we have Calmette, brilliant writer, unquestionably a clever business man, but totally incorruptible, whose services could be gained only by playing on his feelings.

Rumors were adroitly spread that Caillaux had fallen in love with Madame X——, to whom he was paying great attention in the home of Calmette. This sufficed to inflame the editor's indignation against the minister and he determined to spare nothing to bring about Caillaux's downfall. Hence the Figaro's bitter campaign stood ex-Premier Barthou, ready to supply Calmette with documentary evidence of Caillaux's political turpitude.

The most shattering proof in Barthou's possession was considered laid before the Chamber Wednesday in the form of a document, whereby Public Prosecutor Fabre accused Caillaux of having caused Premier Monis to order him to postpone the trial of Rochette, the bank swindler, so that the prosecutor would fail under the statute of limitations.

BULLET PIERCED DOCUMENT.

Barthou supplied a photographic copy of this document to Calmette, who always carried it in his pocket. The editor had it in his wallet when he was assassinated, one of the bullets having pierced it.

While the campaign was proceeding, the matrimonial relations of the Caillaux couple, which had not been of the best for some time, grew worse than ever. She and her husband lived apart and she was subjected to social ostracism. No later than a week ago, while attending a reception of M. Dessaured, a member of the Academy of Science, she was completely ignored. When she left the scandal caused by Calmette's revelations was the general subject of conversation in the reception rooms.

LOVE LETTERS MISSING.

It was on her return from this social cold plunge that a prey to bitter despair she thought to find consolation in reading her old love letters from Caillaux extending over a period of ten years. To her stupefaction she found the secret drawer of her writing desk had been deftly rifled and a bundle of these letters had disappeared.

Madame Caillaux lost her head. She jumped to the conclusion that the letters had fallen into the hands of her husband's political opponents, who would turn them over to Calmette to further his campaign. After an hour of anguished irresolution, she called on Minister Viviani, to whom she opened her heart as an old friend and begged him to intercede in her behalf with Calmette in order to prevent him from publishing the letters, and if possible to prevail on him to cease his campaign. Viviani saw Calmette, but in vain.

Mme. Caillaux then summoned to her residence Judge Monier, of the High Court, and asked him what legal steps she could take to prevent Calmette from continuing his attacks on her husband. On the judge replying nothing could be done legally she decided to act herself.

On the afternoon of the fatal day she purchased a gun, and then with remarkable coolness spent a couple of hours at an employment agency interviewing prospective cooks, one of whom she engaged.

FIRST DEMANDED LETTERS.

Then she motored to the Figaro office, and when she was shown into Calmette's office did not shoot him at sight, as is generally reported, but peremptorily demanded the return of all her letters. The editor replied:

"I won't see them, but I will keep them."

The last words had scarcely passed his lips when the first shot rang out, followed by five others in quick succession.

Six hours later Calmette breathed his last. In the dead of night the latter hours of a woman heavily veiled stepped out of an automobile at the private hospital where the body lay, forced her way to the death bed and gave way to a paroxysm of grief. It was Madame X.

With the death of Calmette her with the famous editor faded away almost on the eve of its realization.

Her husband, in order not to stand in the way of a friend's happiness, had consented to divorce her, while Calmette through the intervention of friends had succeeded in obtaining a divorce which he kept secret from everyone.

With this episode the curtain is rung down for the present at least in the feminine element of a drama which in the words of Gustave Terry, another prominent journalist who is attacking Caillaux, called "the blackest turpitude of the Roman decadence."

The political sequel to the tragedy is not less enthralling. The scene is the Chamber of Deputies when Louis Barthou read Fabre's report showing the pressure Caillaux has brought to bear on him to postpone the Rochette trial, recalled the most passionate phases of the Dreyfus affair. But I am informed on irrefutable testimony that still more sensational evidence concerning the finance minister's methods are yet to come.

CAILLAUX'S DEAL WITH GERMANY

The story will now be told for the first time of how Caillaux, when Premier, bartered with Germany during the Agadir crisis in such way that he merited Clemenceau's famous phrase that he "deserved impeachment."

Totally disregarding the negotiations being conducted by his Foreign Minister, De Selves, Caillaux secretly offered to the Kaiser to surrender French rights of pre-emption over the Belgian Congo, a French island in Oceania, the cession of the Middle Congo and a financial entente with Germany in the East.

Thereupon the Kaiser had a cipher message sent to the German Embassy in Paris instructing his Ambassador not to treat with De Selves, but with Premier Caillaux direct. This message, which was called "the green dispatch," because it was printed on green paper, was intercepted and handed to De Selves.

CAUSES FALL OF CABINET.

The Foreign Minister immediately took it to President Fallieres, who summoned Caillaux and tried vainly to arrange matters between the two Ministers. De Selves divulged the matter to Clemenceau, whose subsequent intervention in the Senate led to the dramatic downfall of the Caillaux Cabinet.

Immediately after the interview at the Elysee Palace, Caillaux went to the German Ambassador and asked him why the Berlin Foreign Office had the temerity to entrust such a dispatch to the telegraph wires. Whereupon the Ambassador retorted: "How did you know such a dispatch existed?"

Caillaux was forced to admit the French government knew the German cipher. This confession threatened a diplomatic scandal and possibly disastrous irritation between Germany and France, so Caillaux and the Ambassador agreed to suppress the matter, although the German Foreign Office promptly changed its cipher.

These remarkable revelations of the amazing blunders Caillaux committed as a statesman were known to Calmette, but he refrained from publishing them.

FIGARO cartoon lampooning Joseph Caillaux, French Minister of Finance, as "The Man of the Masks." It was Calmette's persecution of Caillaux in the Figaro that led Mme. Caillaux to assassinate the Paris editor.

Figaro Objects to Favors to Prisoner

PARIS, March 20.—The Figaro still appears with a broad black border, and Gaston Calmette's name has not yet been removed from the head of the editorial page.

In an editorial the paper deplores that any privileges should have been extended to the prisoner. It appears that two women prisoners were removed to make way for Mme. Caillaux, after which the cell was thoroughly cleaned, renovated and a carpet laid down. The Figaro alludes to the prisoner's quarters as a cell de luxe and protests against allowing her anything but prison fare.

Hauthier Named as Minister of Marine

PARIS, March 20.—Premier Doumergue today announced the appointment of Deputy Hauthier as Minister of Marine to succeed M. Monis, who resigned yesterday. Minister of Colonies Leburn, who succeeded Monis temporarily, returned to his former post.

10,000 IN MOB AT FUNERAL OF CALMETTE

today, M. Labori, attorney for Mme. Caillaux, urged his client again to throw herself upon the mercy of the court, at the same time pleading extenuating circumstances. Either this course or an insanity plea will in all likelihood prove the method of defense finally adopted.

M. Caillaux, husband of the prisoner, urged his wife to accept this course, arguing that it could be better for her to endure a term of imprisonment than to adopt a means of defense which, if defeated, might mean death for her upon the guillotine.

GUARD BUILDINGS.

Mme. Caillaux is not entirely forlorn. Fruit and sweetmeats were sent into her cell today. All were closely scanned for poison or weapon. There was a strong force of republican guards around the government and other public buildings when the Juares investigation began. The commission was named to investigate the "Rochette case," but M. Jaures said that all trails of intrigue would be followed. Ex-Premier Ernest Monis, who resigned yesterday as minister of marine, was summoned as one of the chief witnesses.

According to the charge against him, M. Monis, while head of the cabinet, brought powerful influence upon Victor Fabre, the public prosecutor, to assist Henri Rochette, a banker, who was charged with swindling persons out of $20,000,000. M. Caillaux is involved directly, as he is alleged to have persuaded M. Monis to adopt this course.

Madame Caillaux Comfortable in Cell

PARIS, March 20.—Maitre Labori, who is to defend Mme. Caillaux in the coming trial after a visit to his client and reported that her good, and beyond showing signs of fatigue, says she gives no indication of breaking down.

She was well last night, left her cot at 8 o'clock this morning and wrote letters. She complained to the matron of her cell. At 11 a. m. luncheon was brought from a restaurant, saddle mutton, macaroni a l'Anglaise, potatoes, milk, vichy and water.

Her younger daughter by an earlier marriage, Juliette Chretien, is allowed to visit her daily. Her husband, as well as her attorney, called on her in the afternoon.

Mme. Caillaux Is Given Every Luxury in Jail

PARIS, March 20.—In France, as in America, prisons can be converted into palaces for wealthy wrongdoers.

Mme. Caillaux is leading her life in prison deprived of no comfort. With her in the same great penitentiary are many hundreds of women undergoing that harshness of treatment for which St. Izarre Prison is notorious—some of them for offences which, compared with the crime of the former finance minister's wife, are insignificant.

The only things lacking in the luxurious existence which Mme. Caillaux is leading are floral decorations, the governor of the prison having refused to allow her to receive hundreds of bouquets. Her apartment is cell No. 12, which Mme. Humbert and Steinheil occupied.

It is now tastefully decorated as a boudoir. Smyrna carpets cover the floors, the walls are draped with Persian hangings relieved with Venetian mirrors, Louis Quinze furniture has been supplied and she sleeps in a feather bed.

Mme. Caillaux's luncheon and dinner are sent in by the most expensive restaurant in Paris. The only contribution to her table supplied by the prison cuisine is a bottle of mineral water.

Madame Caillaux is elegantly gowned, and although ordinary prisoners are not allowed to wear jewelry, her diamond-studded wrist watch has not yet been removed.

The elaborate accounts published of the "Society prisoners' agreeable cell life" attract huge crowds to the jail gates, where they wait all day, hoping to see her maid arrive with fresh gowns which Mme. Caillaux has selected for the day. Public indignation at the special favors she receives reached its height when it became known that matting has been laid in the corridor outside her cell door.

Six women usually occupy cell No. 12, but the former minister protested against this order of things, so his wife remains undisturbed by the company of other malefactors. The superfluous beds have been removed to make room for her special furniture.

Protest Failure to Search Caillaux

PARIS, March 20.—The newspaper Eclair protests against the failure of the police to search the Caillaux residence for incriminating documents which might be used in the interrogation proceedings set for Monday or Tuesday.

"SUNKIST" Oranges Are Always Good

ELIOT, AT 80, HAPPY, HALE AND HEARTY

Charles W. Eliot, president emeritus of Harvard University, today observed his eightieth birthday at his home in Cambridge.

"It is essentially a family observance," said Mrs. Eliot. "There is to be no reception or anything of a special nature. Members of the immediate family will simply gather."

President Eliot rounded the eightieth milestone hale and hearty. He did not take his morning bicycle ride today, but otherwise his routine was as usual until afternoon, when the members of the family came with their cheery greetings.

The postman brought a pile of letters and messenger boys arrived with telegrams. The congratulations came from all corners of the world, for "Prexy" has friends and admirers in every land—former Harvard boys who never forget his birthday.

The apartments of the old-fashioned white home at the junction of the parkways were brightened with blossoms. This evening there will be a birthday dinner for members of the family only. During the day a few neighbors called, but President Eliot frowned on anything like a demonstration.

Woods Hutchinson Favors Orange Day

LOS ANGELES, March 20.—Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the medical writer, now in Los Angeles, is enthusiastic regarding the observance of March 21 as California orange day. He says:

"It is the golden opportunity to place the golden fruit of the Golden State before the whole world.

"Here are ten good and sufficient reasons why people should eat oranges on orange day:

"1—They look good.

"2—They taste good.

"3—They are good.

"4—They are rich in medicinal qualities.

"5—Foods are better than medicine.

"6—Oranges neutralize excessive fat in foods.

"7—Oranges are good dietary balancers.

"8—Oranges are good to eat at every meal.

"9—It is better to keep well than to get well.

"10—Oranges are good to eat between meals."

Father of 10 Reported Lost.

Mrs. Labrato Visconti, forty-eight of No. 616 Washington avenue, Chelsea, reported to Chief of Police Grover today that her husband has been missing since Monday. She said she knew of no reason why he should disappear. Mrs. Labrato has ten children to care for.

How I Have Kept My Health and Working Power Till 80

By President Emeritus Charles William Eliot in the Ladies' Home Journal for April.

From the time I became a tutor, at the age of twenty, onward, I think I have done per day an unusual amount of mental work, much of which, however, has had a routine or repetitive character, as in all teaching and administration. That I have borne much labor and responsibility without ever suffering even a temporary breakdown seems to me to be due—after the inheritance of a sound system, preserved by open-air exercise and the habit of moderate eating. It may have contributed to the fortunate result that at no time of my life have I ever made habitual use of any nerve stimulant like tea, coffee, tobacco or alcohol, although I have never been a total abstainer from any one of these stimulants except alcohol. When I have taken them it has always been in dilute form.

It undoubtedly contributed to my endurance of the laborious and responsive life I led as president of Harvard College for forty years that, beginning in 1871, I passed the long Summer vacation at or near the island of Mount Desert, devoting, however, part of the time during the first nine years to cruising in a seaworthy sloop along the New England coast from Block Island to Grand Manan. It provided for me and my family during nearly a quarter part of the year a simple, wholesome, natural life in close contact with the ocean, woods and hills, with opportunity for various excellent kinds of physical and mental activity, and with freedom from the turmoil, noise, dirt, foul air and nervous tension of city life.

I am aware of two mental or moral conditions which have contributed to my safe endurance of physical and mental strains. The first is a natural gift, namely, a calm temperament; the second is the result of a combination of this temperament with a deliberate practice of avoiding alike anticipations of disappointment and vain regrets.

My experience does not furnish a short, explicit prescription for keeping health and working power till eighty years of age, probably because many and various causes have contributed to the result; but I feel safe in affirming that any one who desires to have a like experience will do well to eat moderately, to sleep at least seven hours a night with windows open, to take regular exercise in the open air every day, to use no stimulants, to enjoy all the natural delights without excess in any, and to keep under all circumstances as serene a spirit as his nature permits. This is the way to win from life the maximum of real joy and satisfaction. Does this seem a materialistic doctrine? It by no means excludes the spiritual influences of abiding love and good will.

Plan Huntington Ave. Improvement

The removal of the grass plot and curbing in the centre of Huntington avenue; the erection of a railroad station in the rear of the Arena, between Massachusetts avenue and Gainsboro street, and the erection of a bridge across the Boston & Albany yards, from Gloucester street to West Newton street, were plans proposed for the betterment of Huntington avenue at a meeting of the Huntington Avenue Improvement Association.

Paducah Wins in Rate Case Decision

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The Interstate Commerce Commission today ordered that on vegetables and canned goods the rates to Paducah, Ky., should not exceed those to Cairo by more than one cent a hundred pounds and the same scale was fixed for lumber from Paducah to the north. The commission also approved the suspension of the cancellation of joint rates on marble over the Rutland Railroad from Vermont points to New York.

OFFER $6,000 NOW FOR CLEW TO KIDNAPING

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—With the total of rewards offered for the return of seven-year-old Warren McCarrick increased to $6,000, the detectives working on the case are hopeful that they will be able to secure a clew to the whereabouts of the kidnaped child. This is the eighth day of the search that thus far has been a complete failure. Thousands of circulars are being printed for distribution in all the cities and towns of the United States and Canada and Europe. They carry no announcement of the reward offer and a complete description of the missing boy.

The full power of the city administration is now behind the hunt for the boy. All vacant houses will be searched and the river dragged in an attempt to find trace of the boy. More than 1,000 special officers and police will be required to complete this task. Reports from Elmira, N. Y., that a strange man and woman had been seen there with a boy dressed in girl's clothing caused quick action at detective headquarters. The trio were said to be headed for Buffalo and the police of that city as well as those in Elmira were asked to hold the man, woman and child if they could be found.

Who Are Arielists?

They are generally women, though not necessarily.

They are gentlewomen, if women at all.

They do not live to drudge.

They are innately neat.

They hate dirt though they don't enjoy chasing it all the day long.

They do not object to work but they prefer to do the things that count most.

They minimize drudgery that they may maximize the highest forms of endeavor.

They play and rest to be able to do that which is most worth while.

They avoid drudgery that they may play, rest and work more.

They are true household economists; they spend in order to save.

They save their strength to add to their income of knowledge.

They save their time and strength to add to their income of companionship with children and friends.

They are too wise to count that a household expense which economizes strength and time for the high uses of companionship.

They think too highly of the approval of their husbands to [illegible] wearing a haggard look at night when it can be avoided.

They appreciate so fully a well-ordered household that they avoid overwork for their maids as carefully as for themselves.

They live to live and to let their maids live.

Such women are Arielists, though they do not know it.

And will not an Arielist entertain Ariel?

BURNS TO PROVE INNOCENCE, OF FRANK, HE SAYS

ATLANTA, Ga., March 20.—William J. Burns, the detective investigating the Frank case, declared today that he would prove Frank innocent. "This case," said Burns, "is easier than I expected. There is certainly no mystery that cannot be cleared up, and the facts will speak for themselves when made public. When we bring the facts to light and Solicitor Dorsey has the report I haven't the slightest doubt that he will be convinced.

"I am working with an absolutely open mind. The trail certainly looks clear to me, and I think all be satisfied as to the truth of my report."

Missing Somerville Brakeman Is Found

John W. Mitchell, twenty-three, of No. 164 Glenn street, Somerville, a freight brakeman on the Boston & Maine, who was thrown from his train near Old Orchard Beach, Me., was found in bed at the home of an Old Orchard physician after trainmen had hunted for him for hours. Mitchell says he attached torpedoes to the tracks to stop a train, but finding it so cold he crawled to the railroad station. Not finding any one there he continued his journey to the physician's home.

Supposed Negroes Declared White

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 20.—Eight children of Mrs. Camille Monpiero, heretofore known officially as negroes, have been officially declared white persons after a long court fight, during which sensational charges were made. Each of the eight, all adults, were registered by the city Board of Health as negroes when born. Church records showed them to be white.

Pastor Calls Darwin Beliefs Out of Date

PITTSBURGH, March 20.—"The man who believes in Darwin is out of date," declared the Rev. Charles Morgan, speaking at the mid-Winter Bible Conference. "Darwinism is dead. There is no scientist today standing on the same ground as Darwin stood in his theory of evolution."

Mayor Harrison Sets New Walking Record

CHICAGO, March 20.—Mayor Carter H. Harrison signalized his complete recovery from the recent attack of bronchitis which laid him up for five weeks by walking from his home at No. 3116 Sheridan road to the City Hall in sixty-one minutes. His best previous time was sixty-two minutes. The distance is between four and four and a quarter miles.

"BACKLESS" SKIRT TAKES HOBBLE OUT OF THE TANGO GOWN

The Maxixe gown models showing low fullness of bottom of skirt permits of free movements of limbs in dancing the Maxixe. The new dances have sounded the knell of the hobble for evening wear.

Boston will have an opportunity to view the famous Paquin collection of Spring and Summer gowns this afternoon and Saturday at 2:30 o'clock in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Somerset. Mme. Henri Joire, sister-in-law of Mme. Paquin, has arrived in Boston with her company of more than twenty people, including her four French and two American mannequins, their maids, wardrobe women, stage carpenter, light man, M. Charles Koenigswerther, who is assisting Mme. Joire in managing the "Exposition d'Art" and a few others.

The beautiful young Parisian courtiers will show her line of more than 100 gowns, frocks, wraps, manteaux and tailored suits and nearly as many Parisian hats. None of the creations are for sale, nor is Mme. Joire taking a single order.

The exposition is purely an artistic and social affair to show to American women the creative genius of Paquin. In the cities in which the gowns have been exhibited during the past fortnight—New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Chicago—the crowds have been so great that many women have been turned away at the doors.

Simultaneously with this exhibit, Mme. Paquin is conducting her exposition in Paris. The gowns shown in this country are exact duplicates of those being displayed in Paris.

Finds Charles River too Cold for Suicide

The cold temperature of the water in the Charles River basin frustrated an attempted suicide when a blind man who refused to give his name jumped from the float near the West Boston bridge. When he found that the water, which was only three feet deep, was hovering near the freezing mark, he prayed he would not die and walked ashore.

Fels Wills $50,000 to His Secretary

PHILADELPHIA, March 20.—The entire estate of the late Joseph Fels, single tax advocate, is left to his widow, with the exception of $50,000 willed to Walter Coates of Middlesbrough, Yorkshire, England, "as a token of appreciation of faithfulness to me and as a man." He was Mr. Fels' secretary.

Fear Man Gone with $1,000 Has Met Death

In the belief that a murder has been committed, the police have been notified of the disappearance of Thomas Dembstrom, forty, from his home at No. 33 Melbuby avenue, East Watertown. When he disappeared he had $1,000 with him and it is feared that this money may have led to his death.

Probe $50,000 Fund to Beat Hughes Bill

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The Senate Lobby Committee today started an investigation of the charges that a fund of $50,000 was raised in the interests of prison contractors to defeat the Hughes bill to regulate and restrict the interstate transportation of convict-made goods.

YES, INDEED.

Breakfast, if you like, in well-appointed, well-kept houses with "Furnished Rooms To Let." Sunday AMERICAN Want Ad Section tells about them. Greatest Quality-Quality Circulation.

It is the first time a complete line has been sent to this country by Paquin, so that American women can see the entire collection under one roof at one time.

Many new and startling styles will be revealed to Bostonians. For one thing, the bobble skirt has disappeared; likewise the slit skirt, in afternoon wear. In evening gowns some are going to be seen, but these are only ankle high.

Extreme decolletage will be found in evening gown design, especially in the back, some of the creations being practically "backless." New Paquin rolling collars that stand in a graceful fold several inches high and well away from the neck are features of the afternoon suits and many frocks.

Following the Parisian custom, tea and collation will be served at 4:30 o'clock.

DYING MOTHER DROWNS 2 BABY GIRLS IN A TUB

GREENWICH, Ct., March 20.—Because she believed she was dying of tuberculosis, Mrs. William Anthony drowned her two daughters, two and three years old, and tried to kill herself by taking carbolic acid. She was in a critical condition today.

Her husband, a prominent contractor, found a note from his wife. Fearing the worst, he opened the bathroom door. On the floor by the tub were children's clothes. In the tub were two little bodies. Marjory, three-years-old, and Vivian, two, were lying on their sides face to face. They were lifeless when their father snatched them from the water.

Rushing into a bedroom across the hall, Mr. Anthony found his wife, her burned lips showing how she had tried to follow her baby girls.

Only two days ago, according to her husband, she told him she was going crazy. He learned it off and then forgot about the occurrence. The three months' old boy of the couple was found in an upper chamber unharmed.

Mysteries of Rheumatism Practically Solved

Action in the Tissue Cells of a Most Remarkable Antidote.

S. S. S. is a Regular Wizard in Driving Out Rheumatism.

Rheumatism is often the effect of some other blood affliction that has left its impress in the joints, muscles and mucous coverings of the body; it works into the tissue cells, those tiny, little bodies in which nutrition goes on. And it is here that a most remarkable medicine known as S. S. S. does its most active and most effective work.

Its action is marvelous. Bed-ridden rheumatics get on their feet as if by magic. That cold, clammy sensation that made you hug a red hot stove is gone in a twinkling. That excruciating pain that made a feather lay as heavy as a ton of coal on the skin is gone. You get up and dance with glee.

Your rheumatism is gone—absolutely! It is an actual logical fact, that Swift's Sure Specific flushes your blood, gives your entire blood circulation a fine thorough bath. It just [illegible] a twinkling irrigates every [illegible] body. It rushes into every [illegible] the crowds, muscle, ligament, tendon, mucous surface and every nerve to thrill with freedom, with health, with new found happiness.

And best of all, S. S. S. though a powerful searching, overwhelming enemy to pain and the causes of rheumatism is as pure as the dew on a peach blossom, as powerful as the heroic works of nature, as reassuring as the peremptory demand of the most exact science.

Ask for and insist upon getting S. S. S. the world's cure for rheumatism.

For private, personal advice on stubborn chronic rheumatism write at once to the Swift Specific Co., 252 Swift Building, Atlanta, Ga. Their medical department is famous on all blood diseases, and is equipped to make blood tests, approved by [illegible] authorities. Get a bottle today. Then [illegible]

WHAT DID THE MUMMY SAY?

WARN OF WAR PERIL IN TOLL REPEAL POLICY

WASHINGTON, March 20.—The National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which is waging a strong fight against President Wilson's Panama Canal surrender, has issued the following statement:

"A tremendous effort is now being made to secure the repeal at the request of Great Britain of that provision of the Panama Canal act which exempts American vessels engaged in coastwise commerce from the payment of tolls. This effort is likely to succeed unless those who are opposed to it organize in the interest of Great Britain and the transcontinental railways rather than of the American people shall enter a prompt and energetic protest.

"It is claimed by Great Britain that the free tolls' provision is a violation of the Hay-Pauncefote treaty, but the members of the Senate who voted to ratify that treaty held a different view. Senator Lodge, who was in London while the negotiations were going on, and afterward was in charge of the treaty in the Senate; Senators Clapp and Perkins, former Senator Hard, the late Senator Davis, who was chairman of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations, and Theodore Roosevelt, then President, all believed that under that treaty we had the right to limit our own shipping as we pleased; otherwise the treaty would never have been ratified.

RAILROAD VIEWPOINT.

"The transcontinental railways have always opposed the building of an isthmian canal, and are now using every effort to make the competition of the canal as light as possible and to largely destroy the main economic advantage which the canal was expected to produce.

"If the United States is to be included among 'all nations' in the matter of tolls, it must necessarily be on the same footing as to every other point mentioned by the treaty.

"The warships of the United States must pay the same tolls as the warships of other nations. The United States would have no right to fortify the canal. It is fortifying it, nevertheless. The United States would be compelled to give passage to the battleships of a nation with which it was at war, with the risk (or, rather the certainty) that the canal would be destroyed.

COULD NOT EMBARK TROOPS.

"The United States in time of war could not embark or disembark troops, munitions of war or supplies within the canal zone, nor allow one of its battleships to remain in the canal, or within three miles of either end of it, for more than twenty-four hours at a time.

"If a fleet of an enemy's battleships were waiting outside the three-mile limit, a smaller fleet, or a single battleship of the United States must go forth to certain defeat, to be followed possibly by the capture of the canal and the loss thereby of our national safety.

"The canal was built at the expense of the United States. This country alone is responsible for its maintenance, its operation and its defence."

The statement was signed by Senator Joseph E. Ransdell, as president of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress.

Somerville Man Cuts His Throat

Hearing moans, Mrs. George H. Frost of Pearson road, West Somerville, went to the room of her son Bryant, twenty-five, and discovered him lying across his bed with his throat gashed and a razor at his side. He was taken to the Somerville Hospital, where he became so violent while delirious that a policeman was summoned to guard him. The family said he had been suffering from a nervous breakdown.

Wins Argument for No Panama Tolls

John J. Connolly of Newton won the seventh annual debate of Marquette Debating Society of Boston College. The prize is a gold medal, the gift of John J. Lannin, president of the Red Sox. The subject was: Resolved, that American vessels engaged in coastwise traffic should be exempt from payment of tolls in passing through the Panama Canal. Connolly was for the affirmative.

Mrs. Helen Beryl Wheeler, whose sensational divorce from Thomas H. Graydon, the Harvard football star with whom she eloped in 1903, brought her into the limelight several years ago, has brought suit to break the $7,000,000 will of her father, Joel Parker Whitney, according to San Francisco dispatches today.

The society young woman's will fight follows close on the heels of dispatches to the effect that her brother, J. Parker Whitney, Pacific Coast clubman and former Harvard collegian, is soon to be placed on trial under the Mann white slave act.

Mrs. Wheeler is now the wife of Joseph Columbus Wheeler, Jr., of Fort Thomas, Ky. She divorced Graydon in 1909.

While a school girl at Miss Ely's exclusive school in New York, the then Beryl Whitney was banished for her girlish pranks. She was under the espionage of a chaperone.

Hardly had the chaperone and her charge arrived at Sharon Springs—the place of "exile"—than a young man appeared. Miss Whitney passed him off as her brother. But the experienced dueuna in charge made inquiries and learned he was none other than "Blondie" Graydon, the stalwart and handsome young Harvard gridiron star.

"Yes," admitted Miss Whitney, "'tis he indeed. But I am engaged to marry him. You can't object to my fiance visiting me, can you?"

The second night after that a number of Graydon's friends from Harvard put up a ladder against the house where Miss Whitney lay supposedly sleeping. She ran to the window and scampered down the ladder, and a few days later her engagement to young Graydon was announced.

It was agreed she was to finish her term at school and be his term at college. Immediately after his graduation they slipped away, and after an exciting jaunt through three States found a clergyman who made them one.

SOMERVILLE ALDERMAN IS FULL OF "PEP"

Right at the start of its career the new City Planning Board of Somerville receives from President David H. Fulton of the Board of Aldermen what might lightly be described as a "swift kick in the shins."

Young and full of enthusiasm, the Planning Board said: "We'll meet on April 7 and have President Fulton of the Aldermen with us and we'll all talk over any changes needed in the city ordinances and the city business generally."

So Chairman Malcolm E. Sturtevant of the City Planners wrote a little note to President Fulton to that effect.

Fulton is a regular Alderman and he thinks he and his board can run the city all right. If any ordinances need changing is and the rest of the Aldermen will change them. Receiving Chairman Sturtevant's invitation, President Fulon said: "Well, I'll be ding-dinged!" or words to that effect. Then he grabbed his biggest pen and—this was today—and wrote a freezing declination along these lines:

"The Aldermen, elected by the people, make each ordinance changes as seem best. Any notions I have as to changes I'll give first hand to my own board.' I would suggest that you study model homes and model city lay-outs etc. Incidentally, your Planning Board is spending money without having an appropriation."

That was the general tenor of the letter.

Freely translated it might be given thus:

"Run along and sell your papers." The young and enthusiastic Planning Boar dis yet to be heard from.

Chased Her with Razor, Wife Says

Mrs. Sarah T. Stepney told Judge Creed in the domestic sessions of the Municipal Court how her husband, Caleb Stepney, chased her through the street with a razor and threatened her life. Stepney was warned by the court to refrain from bothering his wife in the future under penalty of a heavy jail sentence. Stepney rooms at No. 612 Shawmut avenue and has been separated from his wife several months.

New Cast to Sing 'Rigoletto' Tonight

"Rigoletto" will be sung tonight at the Boston Opera House with a largely new cast.

The Gilda will be Felice Lyne, American soprano who took London by storm when she made her debut there in the same role two years ago. Pasquale Amato will sing his season's farewell as the Jester.

Harvard Debating Teams Are Named

The two Harrard debating teams to argue against teams from Princeton and Yale in the triangular debate March 27 have been selected. The affirmative team to oppose Yale at New Haven be E. R. Adams, J. Bovingdon, and H. Epstein, with Paul R. Sayre as alternate. The negative team to meet Princeton at Cambridge is L. Brewer, B. H. Kollenberg and P. Stern, with R. L. West as alternate.

SLIM HOPE FOR DEPOSITORS IN SIEGEL BANKS

NEW YORK, March 20.—Inventories made public today indicated that the depositors of Siegel & Company, bankers, cannot get more than about 15 cents on the dollar. They may get considerably less than even that.

The Simpson-Crawford and Fourteenth Street Stores today showed a net cost valuation of $1,731,271. Accounts regarded as uncollectable will reduce the net appraisal on which bids will be based to $1,586,932. Thus the full net cost represents about thirty-two per cent of the $4,800,000 indebtedness, which the goods in these two stores are to cover.

The assets of the Boston store were rated at approximately fifty-one per cent. of the net valuation. On this basis the sale of the two stores would net the creditors as a whole approximately 15 cents on the dollar. However, Siegel and Vogel contend that the claims of depositors in the bank should be subordinated to those of the merchandise creditors. If this view is upheld by the courts the depositors will benefit but little through the sale of the assets represented by the stores.

The bids must be in by next Tuesday, and they will be opened Wednesday. Time then will be given for attorneys for receivers, general creditors and depositors to consider whether the bids are sufficient to warrant a sale. This being agreed to, efforts will made to arrive at a compromise by which the depositors will get at least $250,000.

IF BACKACHY OR KIDNEYS BOTHER

Eat less meat; also take glass of Salts before eating breakfast.

Uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked and sluggish, ache and feel like lumps of lead. The urine becomes cloudy, the bladder is irritated, and you may be obliged to get up two or three times during the night. When the kidneys clog you must help them flush off the body's urinous waste or you'll have a real sick person shortly. At first you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, you suffer from backache, sick headache, dizziness, stomach sour, tongue coated and you feel rheumatic twinges when the weather is bad.

Eat less meat, drink lots of water; also get from any pharmacist four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active. Druggists here say the sell lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

Different — How?

With ordinary coffee you simply roast the green coffee bean and grind it.

With G. Washington's coffee it's different—for after selecting the richest beans we can buy, G. Washington separates the pure coffee juice from the injurious acids and oils, and gives you all that nature intended you should drink—and no more.

Thus G. Washington's is the only absolutely Pure coffee on the market.

Don't drink the acids and oils of ordinary coffee. They disturb digestion.

Strengthen Your Lungs Is Timely Advice

when consumption claims over 350 daily in the United States. Neglected colds, overwork, confining duties and chronic disorders exert the weakening influence which allows tubercular germs the mastery.

The greatest treatment that science affords is courage, rest, sunshine and Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion contains pure cod liver oil to clarify and enrich the blood, strengthen the lungs, rebuild wasted tissue and fortify the resistive forces to throw off disease germs.

Strengthen YOUR lungs with Scott's Emulsion—its benefits are too important to neglect.

How the 1914 Girl Keeps in Trim

Is It Any Wonder She's "Slimsey Sue"?

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service

WHEN your grandmother and mine were young persons, with hair in bobbing curls, ankles in pantalettes, and billows of skirts like whipped cream, a canter in the saddle with plumes and sweeping skirts weighted with bullets at the hem was a bit of fine exercise, I'm tellin' you. And a swaying little stroll in the park was one other way of keeping the blood in her cheeks and health all over and about her. But NOW! A stroll is bread-and-milk and a canter is a slow business. Is it any wonder the girl who steps so gaily through nineteen-fourteen with her slim hips and boy-carriage is rather coltish because of the life in her?

She plays polo, along with the rest of the defenders of the cup—driving the little white "pellet" along the green hotel carpet turf—ASTRIDE of her horse, as she should be—sticking to her slippery little eggshell saddle as close as the hair on her mount's satin back—hitting hard—her tongue between her teeth like a small boy—hair tight of her head, fuss and feathers shaved down to nothing! She plays the grand old game that the boys have just finished, gracefully and generously showing off to the aliens across the many waters (down in Jersey, you know, there's a girl-team that is surely UP in the game and looks!)

She dances—my gracious, how she dances! And nowadays the dance is a pretty riot that fascinates and enthuses, puts every muscle a-ripple, makes feet, ankles and all the ceaselessly moving body a tireless, beautifully working thing; shamelessly washes all the powder off a girl's pretty face, sends her blood singing under the skin, and makes of her just the same hippity-hop, limber-limbed child she was when she was ten.

She boxes—oh, yes! (Over in France—behind your hand say this—she fought a fast, furious battle, 'til one of her "went out.")

And to finish off her little round of exercise, she drives her father's motor car with a loose, quick hand, steady nerves, and a dash of Tetzlaff! And, moreover, when it pulls up with a kind of sinister sound like a breadcrumb in its feed pipe, and CEASES—she can get out and get under and coax it back into a steady, sweet hum again. She can adjust a distributer, take the cork out of the carburetor and examine its works—regulate the um-ha-ha as thoroughly as the next fellow.

Is it any wonder she's a slim, boylike creature? But don't you think—don't you really think she's a mighty sweet, feminine, dainty, womanly young person, after all? Just a bundle of GIRL, with ti ail? Me?—I do!—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Thrilling Story of a Girl Who Won Her Fight for Love Against Tremendous Odds

Based on Jerome Lail's scenes of the same name now running in New York. Copyright, 1914, by P. Dunlap and Jerome Lail. Sole serial rights in the United States owned by International News Service.

By WEBSTER DENISON.

"COME, little secretary," he urged, "ark you afraid of me? Surely you have no reason to be. Now that I think of it," he added lightly, "a little luncheon will be the very thing. I want you to tell me more of your mother and your little brothers, and we'll have a chance to talk of personal things—so many things that one can't discuss in an office where there's nothing but business and so many interruptions."

The little secretary, trapped and cornered, became suddenly inspired. She found an egress from the cul de sac.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, "you've forgotten. You have a luncheon engagement already. Don't you remember? You made me over the 'phone this morning."

"Not important," said Scott, unruffled. "I didn't intend to keep it, anyway. More business. I don't like to talk business with my meals. I want you to see this little place I have in mind. It's Kahn's. There's a French cook there who can turn an oyster into a confection. Now, we'll just go and have a quiet little luncheon and a heart-to-heart talk. You'll tell me all about yourself and I'll give you some good, sound advice. Then we'll understand each other. We'll be good friends . . . and I'll be able to help you."

She looked at him in mute appeal. She was like a fledgling whose last hope of trusting despondency had come. She saw, or felt somehow that behind this big man's suave mastery there was a latent insistence—a demand; a sort of "do as I say, or take the consequences," should she made the plunge, trusting in her own untried strength and fortitude, or should she brave his displeasure and jeopardize her new-found fortune?

He seemed to read her mind, this man who knew the game, for while his voice was as soft and persuasive as before, his words were more menacing.

"Come, little secretary," he said, advancing quite close to her, "come; you're not going to refuse me the first little thing I ever asked of you —are you—after I had made up my mind to assist you in every way and tried so hard to be kind to you?"

"I don't want to displease you, Mr. Scott," she said submissively, "but I can't think—"

"Now, now," he interrupted, "you don't have to think. Just dump up and get on your things. You'll feel all right after we're out of here. Oh, by the way," he added as she walked slowly toward the hatrack, "I want to talk to Crane a minute. You just run along to the—let me see—to Bohlman's drugstore on the corner. I'll meet you there in just a moment."

With halting steps she started toward the door to the hall.

"No, not that way," Scott instructed. "Use my private entrance."

As she passed out the importer skipped lightly to a little alcove dressing room. He brushed down his iron gray hair and perked up the ends of his jaunty mustache. He buttoned the gray frock coat and from a glass on the stand took out a white carnation and fastened it in the lapel. The mirror before him reflected a handsome, well dressed man with a silly and satisfied smirk. His seemed to have forgotten his sinister purpose there'd been any at first.

Crane, for like the gray wolf on the trail he hurried now in the wake of his new secretary.

Her First Luncheon

IN Kahn's they turn oysters into confections. In Kahn's they make cocktails sweet unless you want them dry. In Kahn's they play soft Venetian serenades and salacious waltzes. In Kahn's they have booths.

People come and go in Kahn's and eat luncheons. No one eats lunch.

"Don't you like it, now that you are here?" cooed Mr. Jerrold Scott.

"Yes, I like it—the place—but it seems so strange. If I only thought —it was—right"—

"Now, let me be the judge of that, my dear. Do you think I would bring you here if it wasn't right? Why, the very best people in New York eat at Kahn's. It's a little treat for you—and for me, too, he added, with a smile. "I'm so tired of eating at the club where everyone who sees me wants to sell me something. And, besides, I wanted you to see this place. It's a sort of—education for you. No harm. None at all."

He rambled on to cover her confusion until a sphinx-like figure stood beside them awaiting the pleasure of Mr. Scott—and guest. A guest in blue serge and yellow top boots; a new guest; a fresh guest; a young guest. "How will you have her?" thought the sphinx; "Broiled or fried, or—" But if sphinxes can't talk they shouldn't think.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

Deceivers Ever

"What an awful time you take to get ready, Mildred! I wonder your husband doesn't object to waiting."

Mildred turned from the mirror with the wiliness of former ancestresses in her eye.

"Now, look her, my dear girl," she said, "you're going to be married, so I'll tell you a secret. My husband's never quarreled with me for being late."

"You surprise me, for look at the time you take! Jack would be horribly annoyed."

"It's like this. When he tells me to hurry I say 'All right, dear. Get your hat and stick, and I'll be with you.'"

"Well?"

"You see, I previously hide them both, and when I go down and find them for him it is he that has to apologize for keeping me waiting."

Method in Madness

"I think I've shown you everything now, sir," said the innkeeper, as he conducted his visitor back from a tour of the little Scotch village.

"Ah, but you must see Bobbie, our poor village 'saffie.' He's just on t'other side. If people offer him a choice of sixpence or a penny, he's sure to take the bigger piece."

The "innocent" soon got into conversation with the newcomer, and, to test his foolishness, the visitor gave him the choice of taking sixpence or a penny, and the youth chose the latter.

"Why do you always take the penny? Don't you know the difference in value?"

"To goin' back today?" came the answer.

"Yes."

"Weel, I ken the difference in value right enou', but if I took the sixpence they'd never try the again!"

Stairways and Gardens

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

From the painting by Maxfield Parrish.

Gardens and stairways; those are words that thrill me
Always with vague suggestions of delight.
Stairways and Gardens. Mystery and grace
Seem part of their environment; they fill me
With memories of things veiled from my sight,
In some far place.

—o—o—o—

Gardens. The word is overcharged with meaning.
It speaks of moonlight, and a closing door;
Of birds at dawn—of sultry afternoons.
Gardens. I seem to see low branches screening
A vine-roofed arbor with a leaf-tilled floor,
Where sunlight swoons.

—o—o—o—

Stairways. The word winds upward to a landing;
Then curves and vanishes in space above.
Lights fail, lights rise; soft lights that meet and blend.
Stairways and some one at the bottom standing
Expectantly with lifted looks of love.
Then steps descend.

—o—o—o—

Gardens and Stairways. They belong with song
With subtle scents of myrrh and musk—
With dawn and dusk—with youth, romance and mystery.
And times that were, and times that are to be.
Stairways and Gardens.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"I WAS reading about a great doctor that had discovered a sure cure for all nervous diseases," said the Manicure Lady. "I wish I was where I could get my hands on some of that medicine, George. I have been so nervous lately that several of my customers have spoken about it. I don't know whether it is because I am getting tired of this manicuring business or whether it is just in the air, but I ain't hardly fit to speak to mornings, and I even caught myself snapping at father at the breakfast table yesterday morning. Of course he caught himself snapping right back at me, and I didn't keep no argument going, because he dont allow no crossfire stuff up to our house, but just the same I felt kind of ashamed, and I guess I'll have to write to this great specialist and get some of that nerve medicine."

"Great specialists ain't the only doctors in the world that can help folks," said the Head Barber. "I met a country doctor last week up at Downsville that struck me as about the real thing, and he don't charge no thousand dollars a call either. They call him Doc Britain, and they was telling me over that way that there was eighty cases of typhoid fever on his hands at once. He was on the go day and night for a month or so and cured all but two cases, and probably got his pay from about a third of them; but he didn't kick nary, and there wasn't any long article about him in the city papers either. That kind of a doctor is worth thinking about, just as much as some of them fancy specialists."

"Sure he is," agreed the Manicure Lady. "Just think how proud he would feel, George, if one of them young men whose life he saved should turn out to be the President of the United States."

"I don't think there is any particular chance of anything like that happening," said the Head Barber, "but a man that can save a lot of human lives is always worth thinking and talking about, and that's why I mention him. Do you know, kiddo, I always had a hunch that I could have made a good doctor? I was going to try it when I was a kid, and the old man offered to send me to a medical school, but something turned up at the last minute to change his plans or mine, and here I am barbering."

"If you had made as good a doctor as you have a barber," said the Manicure Lady, "all the world would be talking about you now."

"Thanks," said the Head Barber, "but I guess there ain't much chance of the whole world ever talking about me unless I go and lick the whole Mexican army single handed, or something like that. I wouldn't care so much about being famous, but I would like to be able to do something to help the world, like curing the sick or having money to give away, or something."

"I think you help the world a whole lot," said the Manicure Lady, "by keeping whiskers off so many men's faces. If there is anything in the world that gives most people the willies it is to see a gent with a full beard. If there wasn't barbers there would be a lot of whiskers, so that way, anyhow, you help the world."

"Maybe," said the Head Barber, dubiously, "but I guess I won't never get no medals pinned on me for that. It would take a lot of mental arithmetic to figure where a barber could be a hero."

Sacred Deer

From time immemorial deer have been held in reverent regard by the Japanese. Herds are kept in compounds, and the highest respect is paid to the animals. In olden times the shogun gave the people such a strict order to protect the sacred animals that if anyone happened to hurt or kill them he was put to death on the spot. It was a period of terror.

Even at the present day the deer are so tame and abundant in the shrine grounds that they, in fine weather, stroll round to the streets by twos and threes and surround passers-by, asking for food, and sometimes nibbling the sleeves of the latter in their mouths in an affectionate manner.

Once a year some of the deer are caught by means of a net with a handle by several tamers in service of the Kasuga Shrine office and taken to an enclosure, where their splendid horns are cut off with a saw, while a crowd of spectators watch the work with breathless interest (admission ten sen, equal to about five cents). This done, some of the sacred horns are, as a custom, awarded to the spectators by means of lottery.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

CHAUNCEY DIVERS APPLETON, weighed down by the burden of his seven years and the dignity of his position as president of the Children's Congress, wiped his brow, and gazed down at his audience in brooding silence.

He had called the members in session extraordinary to discuss their newest rival for public attention—the Eugenic Baby. He felt that the future was dark and dreary for the little tots in front of him, none of whom were the offspring of eugenic marriages, recalling with a pang that his own mother was near-sighted and his father had been a colicky baby.

"Is there any chance," he asked himself moodily, "for the son of such a union to develop perfect physical manhood?"

Harrison Hartigan Hardtop, aged four, rose to his feet. His father was twenty years older than his mother, and, therefore, not her eugenic mate.

"I want to ask you," he demanded, shaking his mane at the president, and pounding the back of the chair in front of him, "if any of you ever heard of Confucius?"

It sounded like the bogey man that hides in the 5am closet, and Lucile Simlet, aged three, began to cry.

"His father," thundered the speaker, again shaking his mane, "was seventy-nine and his mother nineteen, when he was born, and can you name a greater man in history? Tell me, can you?" turning so fiercely to the little tots behind him that they felt accused of hiding something in their pockets and began, with whimpers, to turn them inside out to prove their innocence.

Master Hardtop sat down. He had given his hearers a Thought to take home with them; what public speaker ever does as much?

"The incubator chickens," said Sumabelle Lee, struggling to her feet, "are the smartest chickens there is."

Alas, she was an incubator chicken herself, having a step-mother instead of the real thing.

It was decided after many weighty discussions, that no one present would trade parents for other parents who could better stand the eugenic tests; that the men and women who demand eugenic perfections in their mates have worse looking children than their neighbors; that the ordinary catch-as-catch-can children are the best.

It was further decided that a colicky baby is less a nuisance than a graphophone for the reason that if its parents keep the baby, it may grow to be president of the United States, but if a graphophone is kept forever, it will never be anything but a graphophone.

MULTIPLIERS

A little boy was once overheard saying to his pet rabbit:

"How much is seven times seven?"

There being no response from the rabbit, the boy said:

"How much is four times four?"

Still there was no response.

"Now I will give you an easy one. How much is two times two?"

Still the rabbit refused to respond.

"Well," said the boy, "I knew father was fibbing when he said rabbits are the greatest multipliers in the world!"

A Message to Thin, Weak, Scrawny Folks

An Easy Way to Gain 10 to 30 Lbs. of Solid, Healthy, Permanent Flesh

Thin, nervous, underweight men and women everywhere are heard to say, "I can't understand why I do not get fat. I eat plenty of good, nourishing food." The reason is just this: You cannot get fat, no matter how much you eat, unless your digestive organs assimilate the fat-making elements of your food instead of passing them out through the body as waste.

What is needed is a means of gently urging the assimilative functions of the stomach and intestines to absorb the oils and fats packed them over to the blood, where they may reach the starved, shrunken, run-down tissues and build them up. The thin person's system is like a sponge—eager and hungry for the fatty materials of which it is being deprived by the failure of the alimentary canal to take them from the food. The best way to overcome this sinful waste of flesh-building elements and to stop the leakage of fats is to use Sargol, the recently discovered regenerative force that is recommended so highly by physicians in all parts of the country. Little Sargol tablet with every meal and notice how quickly your cheeks fill out and rolls of firm, healthy flesh are deposited over your body, covering each bony muscle and protecting point. Your druggist has Sargol, or can get it from his wholesaler, and will refund your money if you are not satisfied with the gain in weight it produces as stated on the guarantee in each package. It is inexpensive, easy to take and highly efficient.

Caution: While Sargol has produced remarkable results in increasing weight in thousands of cases of general stomach trouble, it should not be taken unless you are willing to gain enough to be noticeable. Use it before meals or soon, for it is a wonderful flesh builder.

FORBES SEES NO 'MAGIC' IN CURRENCY BILL

By B. C. FORBES, Business Editor.

The new currency system will not, as if by magic, transform business depression into prosperity or make hard-up people flush of cash.

There is need for a warning concerning what the new system will do and will not do.

At first it will do very little of anything.

It cannot be put into running order in time to meet next Fall's crop demands. That is the first point that a fair appreciation must be conveyed.

* * *

Next to no State hurriedly passes laws as is proposed to lower the reserves to be carried by trust companies and State banks. The impressed citizens in many quarters that it will be safe to discard existing reserve safeguards and lean upon the Federal Reserve system; should think reserve requirements are to be modified; hence it may seem logical to slacken the reins upon State banking institutions. After the new system is in full working order, such a course may become safe and advisable. But for States to precipitately remove safeguards before the new machine is running smoothly would be provocative of danger and disaster.

* * *

The new system will not make it easier for a merchant not deserving credit to obtain credit. To begin with, it will be of little assistance in enabling even those entitled to credit to borrow more extensively. Later it should permit, and doubtless will create, great expansion of mercantile credit. But this will come gradually if bankers do their duty by acting conservatively and prudently.

* * *

Merchants and others interested in commercial paper should lose no time in consulting their bankers as to how the new law will affect their relations. "Will you continue to regard me as heretofore?" should be taken up by mercantile people with their bankers and others involved, so that no false expectations may be cherished with consequent disappointment and possible loss.

* * *

It looks as if two-name paper will become fashionable. No other civilized country uses single-name bills with anything approaching the freedom of the United States. A little can be said in favor of single names, but the advantages, banking authorities agree, are preponderately on the side of double-name instruments of credit. The prospects are that those who adjust their methods to a double-name basis will find no difficulty in accommodation on easier terms than those who adhere to the old arrangement. In other words, the latter are likely to be discounted on easier terms than single-name paper. Hence, drawers should lose no time in investing their methods so as to get advantage of the lowest rates.

Of course, single-name paper cannot be abolished instanter, but the trend will be toward the double-name kind, anyway, why not fall into line at the outset and reap the cash benefits?

* * *

The organization committee, headed by Secretary McAdoo, will, I understand, start its arduous task of selecting the Federal Reserve Bank cities and defining their territory early next month—perhaps about the 1st.

* * *

President Wilson will then be in position to name the selections for the Federal Reserve Board—the nations Finance Supreme Court. Even those close to the administration do not yet know who will form this all-important body. Confidence is felt and expressed on all sides, however, that the members will be men of weight, notwithstanding the fact that a salary of $12,000 is not a prize for a banker of conspicuous ability.

* * *

The Federal Board will proceed to select a chairman for each regional reserve bank. He will form the connecting link between the bank and Washington.

* * *

The bankers in each district will choose the president of the local bank. On this official will devolve tremendous responsibility in running the institution, of conducting its practical banking operations. He will be the real head of each banking district. The bankers, naturally, will see to it, for their own protection, that a big man is chosen, one who will not be overshadowed by the Federal appointee as chairman of the board.

* * *

Purely as gossip, the names mentioned for New York are National Bank Examiner Streeck as chairman and A. Barton Hepburn (now chairman of the Chase National Bank) as president. Personally, I regard this as a likely selection.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks were strong this afternoon, the firmer tone having continued during the hours calls and other options were needed. The administration is getting more and more nervous over the business situation. The control of the next Congress will be imperilled if railroads go bankrupt; in there is a great army of men out of work and no profit for merchants and other men in business. When Mr. Wilson has talked with callers at the White House he has, it is stated, let it be known that the government is considering the increased cost of railroad operating and the decrease in net earnings.

"The President revealed no," it is said, "that while he had not been consulted by the Interstate Commerce Commission as a whole, when individual members had called on him he discussed everything they had brought up with frankness.

"Mr. Wilson considers as a important factor the question of whether or not the railroads would get the proposed increase in freight rates. He made it clear that this was 'the big thing' in the situation but did not express any opinion on the merits of the increase."

MR. WILSON AND ROADS.

It is reported that President Wilson is deeply concerned over the financial plight of railroads, which he says is expected to appear when showing as to earnings for this month final and many other lines of trade are affected and business is generally unsatisfactory. On going it is claimed there can be no revival of business until roads are allowed to charge high enough freight rates to pay the carriers' bills and other options were needed. The administration is getting more and more nervous over the business situation. The control of the next Congress will be imperilled if railroads go bankrupt; in there is a great army of men out of work and no profit for merchants and other men in business. When Mr. Wilson has talked with callers at the White House he has, it is stated, let it be known that the government is considering the increased cost of railroad operating and the decrease in net earnings.

"The President revealed no," it is said, "that while he had not been consulted by the Interstate Commerce Commission as a whole, when individual members had called on him he discussed everything they had brought up with frankness.

"Mr. Wilson considers as a important factor the question of whether or not the railroads would get the proposed increase in freight rates. He made it clear that this was 'the big thing' in the situation but did not express any opinion on the merits of the increase."

March 21, "Orange Day" to Honor a Royal Fruit

California, exulting in the golden wealth of a bumper orange crop, calls upon the nation to celebrate tomorrow, March 21, as ORANGE DAY

To the wise and fortunate all days are orange days, for that most luscious and most health-giving of fruits is never banished from the tables of those who can have it—and California, by incessant effort for more scientific and intensive culture of the fruit, has put it within the means of almost all.

But this year the California crop has been phenomenally great, and marvellous in its quality. The year is to the orange what the famous vintage years are to champagnes and Bordeaux. Could but the golden spheres, true apples of Hesperides, be preserved for future use, the oranges of this year would sell at thrice the common cost, like a vintage champagne.

As it is, the celebration must be immediate, the profit taken now and not deferred. So on March 21, throughout the land, in hotels and private homes, in dining cars and clubs, in workmen's dinner pails and at convivial banquet boards, the luscious fruit of California will find its honored place.

Right worthy of the honor is the California orange. The only possible reason for locating the Garden of Eden elsewhere than in California is that had it been there the wise serpent would have tempted Eve with an orange and made the fall of man doubly certain. But now the orange is to play its part in the ascent of man—his ascent toward better health and better living. He who eats oranges may forget most medicines, for they carry within their aureate spheres the distillation of that glorious climate of California, which has long since passed into a proverb.

So when tomorrow comes, celebrate Orange Day to the fullest by partaking liberally of the fruit of this vintage year. It will prove the foundation of a habit, but have no fear, for the habit is one that will lead on to health and happiness. So doing you will rejoice with California in its bumper crop, and join the innumerable caravan of those who hold the orange the royal fruit, as gold is the royal metal, and wish, with Goethe that you might know

"— — — the land where the lemon trees bloom,
Where the gold orange glows in the deep thicket's gloom,
Where a wind ever soft from the blue heaven blows,
And the groves are of laurel, and myrtle and rose."

New Thought by Voltaire—and How He Wrote English

An Interesting Discovery in Russia—Important Especially to Those Interested in the Great French Fighter

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

Voltaire was the greatest of all French thinkers—excepting Charles Fourier. He was undoubtedly the greatest of all French fighters. Perhaps the greatest fighter that ever lived, in the only fighting that counts—intellectual combat against injustice.

To those interested in the real history of the world it is intensely interesting to learn of the discovery in St. Petersburg of memoranda written by Voltaire IN THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

We have read the notes, shall print extracts today, more later.

It is interesting to note how well Voltaire had learned to write in English. In spite of his mistakes, he is easily understood, and in spite of the strange English dress of his thought Voltaire's mind stands out distinct in it.

The discovery of these English notes by the great Frenchman is a delight as great as the receiving of a letter from an absent friend.

We quote exactly his wording and spelling.

While Voltaire, like nearly all the men of a few years ago, was afflicted with ignorant prejudice against the Jews, see how neatly in one of his English notes he condemns anti-Semitism:

"When I see Christians cursing Jews, methinks I see children beating their fathers.

"Jewish religion is the mother of (the) Christianity and grandmother of Mahometism."

A very good expression indeed, "Children beating their fathers." Jewish religion, as Voltaire says, really is the mother of Christianity and the grandmother of Mohammedanism. For the Christian religion, of course, is the outgrowth of the Jewish religion. And Mohammedanism is a combination of the Jewish religion, Christianity and Oriental prejudices. A Jew, by the way, is supposed to have written the Koran, credited by the faithful to Mahomet.

Here is another of Voltaire's notes in English:

"Malborou despised French because he had conquer'd 'em. Law despis'd 'em also because he had cheated them."

There in a few words is keen description of human nature. The English general despises the French because he has beaten them in battle.

And Law, the English get-rich-quick financier, despises them because he has cheated them.

It is no wonder a certain class of politicians and financiers have despised the people of this country and their system of government—they have cheated the people enough to feel justified in despising them.

Little minds are fond of little things—and find it hard to study and endure the big things. You may see a crowd of a hundred stop in front of a big window to watch guinea pigs eat a lettuce leaf. And of the hundred not one would take the trouble to look at the Milky Way. Voltaire describes this characteristic in his quaint English:

"We are commonly unconcerned and careless of all things which deserve our search and admiration.

"But for to make amends, we admire the most common objects and the less worthy of attention of a wise man.

"How very few are wise enough to admire the daily birth of light and the new creation of all things which (are) born every day with light; the everlasting regulation of stars, the perpetual miracle of generation, effects of load stone, of lime burning with water, how very few could fixe their eys upon these usual prodigies whereof the use is so trivial, and the cause so absconded.

"We see attentively and we admire a rope dancer, a mountebank, a preecher, a French marquis, a coch of sex (coach of six)."

How many men now living read willingly the trivial writings of this day, yet neglect the thought, the serious work of the great giants like Voltaire?

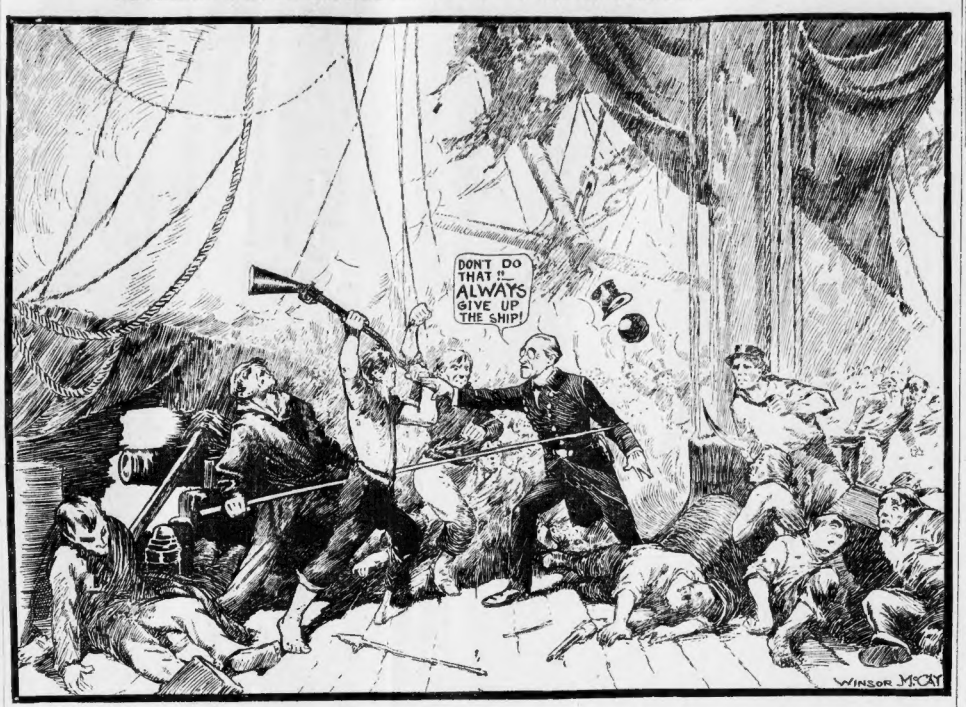
ADMIRAL WILSON INTRODUCES A NEW WORD IN AMERICAN DIPLOMACY



In the battle between the American frigate Chesapeake (Captain James Lawrence) and the English ship Shannon (Captain Broke) off Boston Light in 1813, Captain Lawrence, mortally wounded, gave the famous order, "DON'T GIVE UP THE SHIP," which has since become the keynote of the American Navy.

Laundering Money

By ELBERT HUBBARD

THE other day in a certain city I sent a bundle to the laundry.

When the clothes came back there came also a big, square, sealed envelope. I opened this envelope and found in it three ten-dollar bills, all nicely washed, starched, ironed and carefully placed between two pieces of cardboard and tied up with a blue ribbon in a lover's knot.

No explanation was made, but in the bill I saw they had charged me twenty-five cents for laundering the mazuma.

Of course I kicked, but what was the use!

Then just for the fun of the thing, in order to get a line on that particular washhouse, I went around and demanded an explanation.

The young woman in charge said they had found the money in the right-hand pocket of a left-hand white vest which I had sent in the bundle.

Then she explained, quite incidentally, that whenever soiled clothes came in every garment was carefully inspected for valuables. Every day they found money in pockets, diamond studs in shirt bosoms, valuable links in cuffs and collar buttons enough to roll under all the bureaus in Christendom.

"It is a part of our business," said the young woman, "to protect our customers against their own carelessness."

She saw I was interested, and continued, "We never send garments home with the buttons off. Also, we do any little darning and mending that should be done, and all this without charge. Our business is to please our customers."

* * *

In looking over a volume of the last United States Industrial Census I find that they could not call a laundry a factory, so they gave it a class all by itself.

A laundry has only one thing to sell, and that is service.

You give them a bundle of soiled clothes, and they send back an artistic package, cleansed, ironed, beautified.

The laundries of the United States, outside of hotel, factory or institution laundries, do a business in America of about $125,000,000 a year.

This ranks the laundry industry as eleventh in size in America.

Commercial laundries are now to be found in every first class city of America. They cleanse, wring, dry, iron and starch by machinery. No business in the world has evolved such delicate, sure and effective machines as the laundry industry.

It is now no special recommendation to say, "These goods are laundered by hand." Machines are manufactured that can do the work better than the human hand can. And after all, the machine, you must remember, is an invention of a human brain. And when you use a machine to take the place of a dead lift and labor of human muscles you pay a compliment to the inventor.

The laundries in the United States do, with the aid of machinery and the help of one man, what ten women were required to do before. And with all the saving in labor, yet the laundries of America employ five times as many people as does the Standard Oil Company, and twice as many as the United States Steel Corporation.

Our population is, say, one hundred million; and we pay a dollar and a quarter a year per capita for having our clothes washed, and this does not count all of the work done by housewives who do their own washing.

Laundrymen today are prosperous. Their work comes with unfailing regularity. They can count on their customers, and their customers can count on them.

Next to the supplying of food and clothing the laundry business is the most stable in America.

The men engaged in the business are men of intelligence, ability and worth, who prize system, organization; and into their work they even put a deal of art.

Some of these laundries are very sumptuously fitted up with tile floors and wall, spacious offices with all modern appliances and, valuable automobile service for collecting and making deliveries.

No country in the world has carried the laundry business to the same degree of perfection as the United States has. Europe still lags behind, and in many first class European hotels the washerwoman will come in person and solicit your patronage, just as she used to do in America twenty-five or thirty years ago.

The thing that has brought the change and put it on a firm financial foundation is Yankee inventive genius. Ask Thomas A. Edison if I am right.

Talking by Wireless

By EDGAR LUCIEN LARKIN

Q.—By what power are the electric vibratory waves transmitted into articulate words upon reaching the point of destination to which they were directed in the wireless telephone?

A.—The transmission of electric waves into words in the receiver of a telephone is by means of vibration of the thin iron disk in air. The vibrations are caused by the making and unmaking of an adjoining magnet pole by the vibrations of the vocal organs of the speaker, establishing electric waves.

In the wireless phones the oscillations are of waves in space. Local wires at the receiver rescue these space waves by means of conducting in wires, and these currents pass around the bare of soft iron as in the case of transmission of vibrations by wire.

This subject is thus explained in words, but should be illustrated by complex diagrams to make things clear. Magnets vibrate disks, however made and unmade by varying currents of electricity. The words are not yet directed in wireless. Anybody can cut the waves out of space and hear by means of harmonic apparatus.

Questions Answered

SINGLE TAX DOCTRINE.

H. L. R.—The "Single Tax" doctrine is so-called from the fact that its central idea is that of the taxation of land, as such, regardless of where it may lie, but of land value. This, the Single Taxers claim, would make the cities pay rather than the farmers. The Single Tax scheme has no place for tariffs. It says, "Give us with all the world as perfect freedom of trade as now exists between the States of the Union, thus enabling our people to share, through free exchange, in all the advantages which nature has given to other countries."

THE REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR.

W. F. C.—In September, 1793, the French Convention decreed that the common era should be abolished in all civil affairs, and that the new French era should begin on September 22, 1792, and that each succeeding year should begin at midnight of the day on which the true Autumnal equinox falls. The year was divided into twelve months of thirty days each. In ordinary years there were five extra days, and every fourth year a sixth complementary day. The reckoning was used till December 31, 1805, when it was discontinued by order of Napoleon.

The Country Doctor

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

DAY in, day out, night out, night in,
Where snow is thick and fees are thin,
He hustles with his cheery grin
To fight with ills.
The drives are long, the nights are cold,
He suffers hardships left untold
To call upon some mother old
Across the hills.

The gallant soldier goes away,
While life and drum and bugle play
Bravely to conquer or to slay—
That is his part.
The country doctor rides alone
Through rugged roads, o'er stick and stone,
To heal men, not to make them moan;
God bless his heart!

Dr. Eliot Is 80 Today—A Suggestion

By REV. S. EDWARD YOUNG

Pastor Bedford Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

MIGHT not America do well to make a national event of President Emeritus Charles W. Eliot's eightieth birthday—the 20th of March? His fourscore years epitomize much that we hope posterity will not let die.

To have been born and trained and tried out in Boston, to have had for intimates the immortals of the Emerson - Longfellow - Lowell group, to have become at thirty-five the first layman head of the foremost institution of learning in our western world, to have guided its course nearly forty years, rendering effective there and promulgating throughout the Republic reforms profoundly changing the whole system of education, to have been a discoverer of men and a valiant champion of country-wide and planet-wide enterprises for the unlift of the human race—such an experience has come in equal degree to no other living man.

What a proof it is of religion's hold upon the people that this scholar's statement of his faith should attract more attention than his writings on secular topics! What testimony to his own estimate of the relative importance of the material and the spiritual that he should assign this subject uppermost place in what may be taken to be his philosophy of life wrought out through his long, eventful career!

Multitudes, like myself, will wish that the distinguished educator had gone farther and asserted belief in miracles, particularly in the mortals-made-over miracles of eighteen centuries of gospel conquest; in self-sacrifice, of which the Nazarene is the all-inspired example; in the deity of the Christ in the achieving presence of the Holy Spirit, in the expectation of the great hereafter.

He was speaking, however, of certain verities established by the investigations and reasonings of today's thinking men of scientific temper. The fact that he left much we would include should not lessen our gratification upon reading the lead he has shown us from the inmost book of his brain and heart.

On a beautiful afternoon I sat on the deck of a steamer beside President Eliot as we steamed up the Monongahela River, past the smoking steel mills, past the glass factories, past skyscrapers and works of men, farther and farther into and up to the sources of this material wealth, farther and farther from the man-made world, and I saw a glow on his fine face as a breeze from the mountains swept away the hovering haze.

The whole land thanks him for what he and his like have done for this world, where now we labor, and we will rejoice with him at every nearer approach to the upper sources of our—the world's—best, at every breath of God's higher blows down into God's lower workshop.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox

The Squanderer—You Are Your Own Master, but Will Regret It if You Dissipate Your Greatest Wealth, Health, Through Riotous Living.

YOU have your own night key, young man, and you are your own master.

No one asks you where you are going, or at what hour you will return.

You do as you please.

And if it pleases you to "see life" and "know the world;" you consider it nobody's business.

It is a part of every man's education, you say.

And even if you plant a crop of wild oats, that, too, you believe to be included in your Life School Curriculum.

Every protest made you consider "preaching."

But have you never observed that life itself is a great preacher?

Life and Father Time are two great moralists.

Even when they seem to be laughing comrades, helping you sow your crop of "oats," they are sneering at you secretly and waiting the hour when they can talk to you on the benefits of morality and right living.

The Great Creative Power which made the Universe, and systems of universes, gives each human being certain nervous forces and vital qualities.

Properly used, these qualities and forces can make man very close to God-like, in his mental, physical and spiritual strength.

Just as a large fortune, properly managed and saved, can accomplish miracles in the way of usefulness when rightly applied.

But if that fortune is dissipated day by day, month by month, year by year, its possessor eventually finds himself a pauper.

Precisely so, the virile man finds himself a pauper and worse than a pauper if he begins sowing his wild oats and "seeing life" and "knowing the world," according to the standards set by the devotees of Folly.

Look about you and take mental notes of middle-aged men who have led the life you are living.

You will see gray faces, or blotched and bloated ones; eyes dull and lifeless, or glaring with the brilliancy of stimulants, and bodies, which should be in their prime, crippled with disease, or shapeless with self-indulgence.

Look farther and learn something of the condition of the children of these men.

Among them you will find the crippled, the blind, the idiotic, the deaf and dumb, the weaklings and the insane.

And were the family physician of these men to tell you all he knows, you would lie awake with horror, wondering how the impression has gone abroad that men can sin and pay no penalty; that woman alone pays for her errors.

Woman does pay a big price; not only for her own sins of the senses, but she pays also for the sins of her lover or her husband.

Our asylums for the insane and our homes for incurables are half filled with women and children who have paid the price for the men who believed it was nobody's business if they chose to "see life" and "know the world."

When a woman makes a wrong step in this direction her punishment usually is swift, and the world knows of it.

A man's punishment is frequently long delayed, but when it comes it demands interest on all the time which has elapsed. Many young and middle-aged men you see walking with canes and crutches, and paying large commissions to physicians to say they have "rheumatism" and "neuritis" and other commonplace maladies, are victims of their own vices. They have "seen life" as you are seeing it.

Look at the faces of men in fashionable clubs; how many of these men are, at forty or fifty or sixty, types which seem admirable to you?

You are young; in the morning of life; before you waste your splendid youth and prepare yourself to be a physical pauper at middle life, stop and think of these things a bit.

And consider what qualities and propensities, and what kind of blood you are preparing to give your unborn children.

No doubt it is your intention to give them a pure minded and clean bodied mother.

But what sort of a father will they have?
